The History of Tares, Subsidies, and National Debts, &c.

THOUGH by the Law of Nature all things were common, and all perfons equal, there being neither meum nor tuum, king nor subject; yet, when this law came to be limited by the law of nations, and property came to be claimed, it naturally caused trade and commerce; whereupon sovereign princes became absolutely necessary to maintain and defend fuch property and commerce: and, in order to support them in their administrations of government, and to defray the expences which they must necessarily incur, in maintaining ambassadors at foreign courts, principally to procure justice to be done to merchants; their charges of procuring treaties with foreign princes for the advancement of trade, and of maintaining a navy for the defence of the merchants, by protecting them at fea from enemies and pirates, and also their charges in supporting a court of admiralty for the deciding of maritime causes; they seem originally to have taken subsidies, tributes, or customs, by virtue of the prerogative inherent to their crowns, as given to them by the law of nations, quasi ministeriorum suorum stipendia: which having been customary to have been paid time out of mind, were accounted as an estate of inheritance annexed to their crowns.

In England, whatever was given to the king by parliament, to affift him on extraordinary occasions, was called a subsidy. The money so given was in subsidium regis, an aid to the king, the better to provide for the dignity of the crown, or the safety of the nation, in cases where the standing revenue was not fufficient. In the very early times of the constitution, there was no room for the demand of any fubfidy; for, if we may believe Ordericus Vitalis, fol. 523, the revenue of the conqueror, arising from his demesnes and quit-rents; besides fines and other cafual profits, amounted to 1061 pounds a day, paid in sterling money. But, though he may be mistaken as to the fact, that fuch large payments were made in ready money; yet, it is certain from Domes Day-Book, that a multitude of rents were referved, and paid to the king in money, notwithstanding the affertion of Jervaise of Tilbury, in his dialogue of the Exchequer, book I. chap. 7. that the king's rents were paid in cattle and provisions till Henry the Second's time. But be this matter as it will, the income of the crown was undoubtedly very great; because there were appropriated for the use of it, one 1422 manors, besides other lands and quit-rents, and these lands so registered in Domes-day Book, Sir Robert Cotton fays, were fuch as the Confessor had been in possession of. If so, the lands accruing to the crown from the forfeitures of those who had joined with Harold, must still have made a considerable addition to the conqueror's power and revenue; and, we may imagine, the provisions he made for his dignity and necessary support, must have been exceeding great; fince it is somewhere faid, that Hugh de Grant Maisnell, one of his great officers, had near eighty thousand pounds a year in those days.

As a great part of the lands in England was subject to * knight-service, the profits incident to this tenure were very great; and the common aids to make the eldest son a knight, and to marry the eldest daughter, brought in a vast revenue. Besides these, if the tenure was in capite, that is, immediately from the king, the heir, after his full age, was to sue livery, that is, to pray to be admitted into possession of his lands, upon payment of half a year's profit of them; and, if he was of age at his father's death, then he was to pay primier seisin, which was one whole year's value of the land.

^{*} As all these old tenures are taken away by 12 Car. II. cap. 24. and the hereditary excise substituted in lieu of them, we thought it unnecessary the take up the reader's time with a full explanation of the nature of them.

And, not only the knight-service lands paid the aids before-mentioned, but those held in socage paid them likewise, of common right, according to Lord

Coke, I Inst. 91.

Here we see a vast income, and great dependances upon lands. But, besides the regular profits arising from these tenures, the king, in cases of necessity, and for defence of the realm, could tax and tallage in a very extraordinary manner, all his towns and boroughs of antient demesne; for the tenure was considered to be of a base nature, and not much superior to that of villenage, with this difference only, that our old books call these tenants villanos privilegiatos. As to the fact, that great profit was made by such tallages, the reader is referred to Maddox's History of the Exchequer, where he will find abundant satisfaction.

Besides these, there were other prerogative profits, as strays, treasure-trove, wreck, waifs, amercements, tolls, forfeitures, and escheats; besides a multitude of sines of various sorts, for offences, for franchises, and for law proceedings; but we cannot think that our kings could formerly, as seems to be hinted by Mr. Maddox, arbitrarily refuse to grant the subject the benefit of their process, or deny or delay the execution of justice. And we think clearly, that the law in Magna Charta of Nulli negabinus, nulli vendenus, nec differenus justitiam, was only declarative of, and to enforce the common law and the right of the subject. For, besides the antient coronation oath taken by our kings, by which they swore to do justice; it appears plainly, from the second political law of King Edgar, that if the party could not have justice in the lord's court, the hundred, or the county courts, (where all the property of the nation was formerly determined) he might then appeal to the king, who would do him justice. Indeed, he was to be fined for a false appeal, and to pay the king a fum of money for his writ, which remains to this day for original writs; but still she had a right to appeal; and to have that appeal received, and determined in a judicial way: though there was afterwards, in troublesome times, much oppression of the subject, on account of the money exacted for those remedial writs. But a reasonable fine might well have been authorized by parliament, (as most of the prerogatives of the crown were first given by consent of parliament, if we may believe the Mirror of Justices, p. 3.) not only to defray the expence the king was obliged to be at, for the maintenance of his court of justice, but perhaps to deter men from the profecution of groundless and vexatious suits.

Another considerable article of the crown revenue, was the profits arising from the Jews. Our histories are every where full of the great and extraordinary taxes and impositions laid on them: they were a constant fund for a necessitous court. Mr. Maddox has produced a multitude of the Exchequer records to evince this truth; but, as he has not given any reason for the exercise of this arbitrary power, but only taken notice of the fact that they were so taxed; and, as this conduct of our antient kings seems to have perplexed Lord Coke in some parts of his works; we shall beg leave to enquire into the grounds and reason of this behaviour; because such arbitrary and extraordinary methods are contrary to the analogy of our constitution in other respects.

Some think our kings had a right to use the Jews in what manner they pleased, and that their fortunes and estates were absolutely at the king's disposal, and this by a grant from the legislature. For, it appears by the 29th law of the Confessor, that the Jews were the absolute property of the king. The words are Judaei et omnia sua sunt regis; quod si quispiam detinuerit eos, vel pecuniam eorum, perquirat rex, si vult, tanquam fuum proprium: and the reader may fee this law enforced among the ordinances of Henry the Second and Richard the First, concerning the Jews. He may likewife find a very memorable record in the first volume of Rymer's Collections, where Henry the Third mortgages, for five thousand pounds, to his brother the Earl of Cornwal, Omnes Judaeos regni Anglia, with a power of distraining the bodies of all or any of them, if the money was not paid at the times prefixed. The Jews were univerfally odious, not only from the difference of religion, but likewife from their excessive and imprudent usury. Another reason of this universal detestation of them may be drawn from a passage in Mezeray's history, who says, that the Jews invited the Caliph of the Saracens in the year 1009, to besiege Jerusalem and the Holy Sepulchre, which he accordingly did, and took it: and this fact falls in very well with the time of the Confessor's law before-mentioned.

We shall say little of the tax or tribute called Danegelt; because the nature of it is very uncertain; and about which learned men have greatly differed. We refer the reader to Mr. Selden's treatife De mari clauso, where he will find it was of two forts; one the money raised to bribe the Danes to leave England, and the other for hiring a fleet from the Danes to defend the feas against the pirates. Both these were omitted to be raifed by the Confessor: but the Conqueror, under the pretext of foreign invalions, Jevied a most arbitrary and extravagant one of fix shillings on every hide of land, by virtue of the supposed prerogative to collect Danegelt; which, in the first grant of it, in Ethelbert's time, was by parliament, according to Mr. Selden. But this method of railing money was entirely at an end in the time of Henry the Second; and so that branch of the revenue wholly cut off.

As to the first-fruits and tenths of ecclesiastical preferments, which are of modern date, being given by 26 Hen. VIII. cap. 3. to the crown, we shall likewife fay but little of them. We shall only observe, that Clement the Fifth, or, as some say, Pope John the Twenty-second, first reserved the first-fruits of livings to himself; and that Gregory the Ninth, in the year 1229, was the first who demanded and received the tenths of the clergy, which we mention to correct a mistake that is in the first volume of Roll's Reports, p. 473, where it is faid, that the Pope never had any tenths here till Edward the First's time *; and that a regular taxation of all the benefices here, was then made upon that account. This was not any certain established revenue to the popes, but was asked by them according to the real or pretended exigencies of the church. And this tax was frequently levied on the clergy for the king's use, and fometimes for the king's and the pope's jointly, that there might be less opposition to the grant or collection of it. The first grant by the pope of the tenths of the clergy to any of our kings, was that to Richard the First, according to Sir Henry Spelman. And this tax, according to Mathew Paris, was only on the moveables, and differs from the present revenue, which affects the lands of the clergy. These tenths and first-fruits, by the statute of Hen. VIII. were to be collected by the bishops; but they were discharged of this burden by 3 Geo. I. cap. 10. and the bishops and archbishops were chargeable formerly with the collection of the subsidies granted by convocation, and were answerable for them in the Exchequer.

^{*&}quot; En temps Edw. I. le Pape escrie un letter al roy (que est recorded en l'Exchequer en Fansh. Office per que il request le roy, que puissoit estre un taxation de touts benefices (car devant ceo le pape navoit icy ascun dismes) et que le roy averoit un moitié ove lui, mes puis en proces de temps le pape, prist tout a luy mesme, et exclude le roy et ses successors."

Prisage is an antient duty, payable at common law to the king of two tons of wine of every thip laden with twenty tons, or more, one to be taken before, and the other behind the mast. Such wine may be tafted, and the fullest vessels may be taken for prifage; and fo it was decreed in the Exchequer in the year 1679, on a bill brought by the attorneygeneral, against Hart and Sir William Waller, defendants. If a ship has but ten tons, then only one ton is to be taken, and none, if there be but nine tons, unless there be evidence of fraud: but if there be nine and a half tons, that is fraud apparent to cheat the king, and then prifage of one ton shall be taken; and so it has been held in the Exchequer, as may be seen in Hardress's Reports, 477. Merchant strangers, the Cinque Ports, and the citizens of London, are discharged from prisage; but then such citizens must be freemen and house-keepers, paying fcot and lot, else they will not be entitled to this exemption, as appears from Hanger's Case, reported by Moore 833, by Calthrope 24, and more fully in the third volume of Bulftrode's Reports, fol. 1. It may be further observed, that full prisage shall be paid on breaking of bulk; because prisage is not within the statutes of 28 Edw. III. cap. 13. and 20 Rich. II. cap. 4. as the customs are, which shall be paid only for what is entered. See Yelverton's Reports, 200, and Hardress 362.

Butlerage is a duty of two shillings for every ton of wines imported by merchant-strangers only. It is called Butlerage, because it is paid to the king's chief butler. And, by 1 Hen. VIII. cap. 5. who ever makes false entries of wines to defraud the king of prisage and butlerage, is to forfeit double the value; which, by 2 & 3 Edw. VI. cap. 22. is enforced by the loss and forfeiture of all the offender's goods and chattels, provided the prosecution be within three years. A moiety of the sorfeiture is to go to the king, and the other to the informer.

The customs are likewise said to be part of the inheritance of the crown at common law, that is, before any act of parliament was made concerning them. See Dyer's Reports 43. Davis's Reports 8. The fame is faid in Dyer 165, and in Coke's 12 Rep. 33. of the fix shillings and eight pence for every * fack of wool, and the like fum for every three hundred woolfels, and thirteen shillings and four pence for every last of hides; a last containing twelve dozen, according to Sir Henry Spelman. This indeed is a mistake; for these particular sums were given to the king and his heirs by act of parliament +, 3 Edw. I. as appears from 2 Inft. 58, 59, and Vaughan's Reports 162. But, though the judges might be miftaken as to the fact, that those particular duties were the right of the crown at common law; yet they were right in afferting, that the customs, time out of mind, belonged to the crown; for that some duty was paid for wools and leather before that Statute is evident; fince it appears from the Red Book in the Exchequer, if we believe Lord Chief Justice Hale, that something was paid, though not that precise sum. If so, then Lord Vaughan might well have spared that unnecessary reflection upon the learning of the # judges,

* A fack contained twenty-fix stone, and every stone fourteen pounds.

+ The letters-patent of Edw. I. recite, " Cum prælati, mag-" nates, et tota communitas quandam novam consuetudinem nobis " et hæredibus nostris de lanis, pellibus, et coriis, viz. de sacco " lanæ dimid. marc. de 300 pellibus dimid. marc. et de lasto

" corii, 13 s. 4 d. &c."

1 Upon a question, says Lord Vaughan, raised upon occasion of a new imposition laid by Queen Mary upon cloths; the judges being consulted about it 1 Eliz. were of opinion (he cites Dyer 165.) that English merchants do not pay at common law any custom for any wares or merchandizes, but three, that is, wools, Woolfells, and leather; that is to fay, " Pro quolibet facco lanze "continent. 26 pierres, et chescun pierres 14 pound, un demy marke, and for 300 woolfells, half a mark, and for a last of " leather 13 s. 4 d. and that was equal to strangers and English merchants. This was, continues Lord Vaughan, the opinion being

if his meaning be that no custom at all was pain before that statute. And besides, it appears from the 30th chapter of Magna Charta, that merchants were to come into this kingdom to buy and sell per antiquas consuctudines; which proves that some custom was paid: and, though Lord Vaughan lays great stress upon the statute of 3 Edw. I. that this grant on wools, woolfells, and leather, is called quadam
nova custuma, and so wholly the creature of that act, we think the only inference to be justly drawn from it, is, that only the quantum of those customs was new; and that some duty was paid before, which was the old custom, in opposition to the new one then granted.

That this is no forced construction, will appear from the duties granted by the alien merchants, 31 Edw. I. called custuma nova, not as if nothing had been ever paid by them; but only relatively, in opposition to the duty granted in the third of Edw. I. and so it was new in comparison of that. It is probable, that the customs, as well as prisage, were antiently given to the king, by act of * parliament for the support of the houshold, and defraying the king's expence of providing proper accommodations for the merchants. And this supposition of the customs of all the judges of the times; whence we may learn how fallible even the opinion of all the judges is, when the matter to be folved must be cleared by fearchers not common, and depends not upon cases vulgarly known by readers of the Year-books."

^{*} By Stat. 25 Edw. I. cap. 6. (which is intitled, "The King or his heirs will take no aid or prices, but by the confent of the realm, and for the common profit thereof." It is enacted as follows: moreover, we have granted for us and our heirs, as well to archbishops, bishops, abbots, priors, and other folk of holy church, as also to earls, barons, and to all the communalty of the land, that for no business from henceforth, we shall take such manner of aids, tasks, nor prices, but by the common affent of the realm, and for the common profit thereof, saving the antient aids and prices due and accustomed. — And, by 34 Ed. I. cap. 1. it is ordained, that the king, or his heirs, shall have no tallage or aid without the consent of parliaments.

being granted by parliament, is agreeable to all the other parts of the constitution. Besides, it is expressly declared by 45 Edw. III.cap. 1. and 11 Rich. II. cap. 9. that no impositions shall be set on wools, woolfells, and leather, without consent of parliament.

It is true our kings have, in fact, exercised this power of laying impolts on merchandize; and fome eminent lawyers, have wrote in defence of this prerogative, as some learned judges have judicially maintained it: which the reader may see in Sir John Davis's treatife of impositions, and in Lane's Reports, fol. 22. But still the commons have constantly protested against it, as appears from a multitude of the rolls of parliament; and fuch practice hath been condemned by other judges of the greatest authority and learning. Indeed Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, and King James the First, did it; but as to the legality of it, we refer the reader to Lord Coke's fecond Inft. fol. 63, and 12 Rep. 33, and the statute of tonnage and poundage, 12 Cat. II. where this power so to charge merchandize, is altogether denied.

We are now come to the custuma nova, or custuma parva, petty custom, or duty payable by merchant-itrangers, and begun in the time of K. Edw. I. (A. D. 1304.) when they granted him that they would pay him and his heirs three-pence in the pound for all merchandizes exported and imported by them. And because the charter, containing the above grant, is mentioned and referred to in the 12th Rule, annexed to the book of rates in the statute of tonnage and poundage (12 Car. II. cap. 4.) and the curious reader may be desirous to be acquainted with it, we shall here insert a translation of the Latin copy, transcribed by Mr. Prin, from the original record in the Tower.

For Merchant-strangers concerning liberties granted to them.

THE king to his archbishops, &c. sendeth greeting, concerning the good condition of all the merchants of the kingdoms, lands, and provinces underwritten; that is to say, Germany, France, Spain, Portugal, Navarre, Lombardy, Tuscany, Provence, Catalonia, our dukedoms of Aquitain, Tholouse, Turein, Flanders, Brabant, and all other lands and foreign places, by what name soever called, coming into our kingdom of England, and there remaining.

And, if any defect shall happen to be found in any of our bailiffs, or ministers aforesaid, whereby the said merchants, or any of their factors, shall suffer loss, although the merchant recover his losses against the party in the whole, yet nevertheless, the bailiff, or other ministers, as the sault requires, shall be punished at our suit; and, we grant the said punishment in favour of the merchants aforesaid, for compleating their right.

and let the residue be of other good and fit men, in the places in which that plaint shall be.

according to the merchants law.

Item, We ordain and appoint, and our will and pleasure is, for us and our heirs, that this ordinance and statute be sirmly kept for ever, notwithstanding any liberty whatsoever, which we or our heirs for the future shall grant; the said merchants ought not to lose their above-written liberties, or any of them: and for, and in consideration of their obtaining the said liberties and free usages, and our * prises to be remitted to them: all and singular the said merchants for themselves, and all others on their part, have heartily and unanimously granted to us, that for every bogshead of wine which they shall bring in, or cause to be brought in within our kingdom or dominion thereof; and from whence they are obliged to pay freight to the mariners, to pay to us and to our heirs, by the name of custom, two shillings over and above the antient customs due, and accustomed to be paid in money, within forty days after the said wines are put in store out of the ships.

tain rate of custom; the said merchants have confented to give us and our heirs for every twenty shillings estimation and value of those wares and merchandizes, by whatsoever name they be call'd, three pence in the pound, upon the entrance of their ware and merchandizes, into our kindom and dominion aforesaid, within twenty days after such wares and merchandizes shall be brought into our kingdom and dominion aforesaid, and there shall be unladen or sold: and likewise, three pence for every twenty shillings, at the exporting of what kind soever of wares or merchandizes brought into our kingdom and dominion aforesaid, besides the antient customs formerly given to us, or to others.

We will also, and for us, and our heirs, grant, that no exaction, prize, or loan, or any other burden, shall be imposed in any part or measure, on the persons of the said merchants, their merchandizes or goods, contrary to the form before expressed and

granted.

Witness hereto, the reverend fathers, Robert, archbishop of Canterbury, primate of all England; Walter, bishop of Coventry and Litchfield; Henry de Lacy, earl of Lincoln; Humphrey de Bohun, earl of Hereford and Essex, and constable of England; Adomarus of Valentia, Galfrid of Geynvil, Hugh de le Spencer, Walter de Bello Campo, steward of our house; Robert of Bures, and others; Given by our hand at Westminster the first day of February.

The funds before-mentioned, were the principal fources of the income of our antient kings, and which had been more than fufficient to have anfwered all their expences, ordinary and extraordinary; if it had not been for the extravagance and fuperstition of some, and the unhappy arbitrary conduct of others, which occasioned those bloody and expensive civil wars that make a considerable part of our history. There are few instances of taxes or subfidies till Richard the First's time; There were some scutages, or escuages raised in Henry the Second's time, as appears from the Red Book in the Exchequer; for, in the 12th year of his reign, two pence in the pound was given for the first year, and a penny in the pound for four years after, out of all rents and moveables, for defending the Holy Land: and, in the last year of his reign, there was a tenth of all moveables given for an expedition into the Holy Land.

When Richard the First came to the crown, there was in the Treasury nine hundred thousand pounds, and, in two years time, he raised eleven millions of D marks:

marks; which may be computed at near eight millions sterling: but notwithstanding these vast sums, and others arising by fines and compositions, he fold a great part of his demesnes.

He had ten shillings escuage for every knight's see in his first year; and for his ransom he had twenty shillings for every knight's see; the sourth part of the rents of all husbandmen; a sourth of the rents of some clerks, and a tenth of others; all the gold and silver which the churches had, and all the wool of the Cistertian monks.

For his expedition into Normandy, he had two shillings of every plough-land, and of the occupiers of every knight's fee a third part; though Henry the First, by his charter, which is extant in the Red Book in the Exchequer, discharged the demesses of his tenants by knight's service, that they might the better attend their duty in the wars: and in the year 1108, he had five shillings of every plough-land.

These taxes were so extraordinary, that they rouz'd the jealoufy of the people in the fucceeding reigns; as their patience and acquiescence might probably put King John and Henry the Third upon making experiments of the like nature. But those arbitrary taxes occasioned the civil wars in those kings reigns, and put the people upon afferting their rights and antient liberties; and probably alarmed the towns and boroughs to infift upon their members being regularly fummoned to parliament, the better to defend themselves, and guard against all attempts upon their property. For, in King John's charter at Runnymead, it is enacted, that the boroughs shall have their antient liberties, and that a common council should be summoned for the future to assess aids: which clause, though it be not in Henry the Third's Magna Charta, yet is in force, having been confirmed feveral times in Henry the Third's time, as appears from Matthew Paris's history; who exprefly fays, Henry the Third's charter was the fame with King John's; and therefore this clause must be necessarily implied to be within the law of omnis civitas babeat libertates suas, of which this of sending burgesses was one. And that the boroughs had such right to send their representatives, is evident even from the first writ of summons extant of the 49th of Henry III. (i. e. A. D. 1265.) published by Sir William Dugdale, which by many learned men is reckoned to be the foundation and pretence of the commons?

Those who affert the commons were then first summoned to parliament, ground themselves on this writ; because it is the first we have of this kind. But, considering the civil wars, the accidents, from time to time, and the wilful embezzling and destroying our old records, this is a very uncertain and fallacious way of reasoning. Besides, they differ among themselves in the reason and policy of this change in the constitution; some saying it was the act of the king to weaken the great lords, by bringing in an over-balance from the commons; and others affert it was the lord's defign to get an united interest, as a counterpoize against the encroachments and power of the crown. And the reasons given by both may rather ferve to shew neither are in the right, than to confirm the opinion advanced by each of them. For, not to infift upon the great likeness of our constitution to the old German, where the people always had a share in all consultations of great importance, and the fame names and expressions used and applied by our records and historians to the commons, after they were confessedly a part of the legiflature, as are given them in times wherein this right is disputed: that irrelistible argument of the silence of our historians, in respect to so memorable a change in the constitution; the silence of Bracton, and all our old lawyers; which would be a very reprehensible negligence, if this alteration were then made: the prescriptive right of some boroughs to fend members, and the prescriptive discharge of those of antient demesne, which were in being long before the Conqueror's time: we fay not to infift upon all these arguments, which singly ought to have great weight with every man who is a lover of liberty; we think it appears very plainly from the writ itself, that the commons had a right to be summoned to parliament. For the record fays, "Writs " shall be directed to London, York, &c. and to the other boroughs." Does not this prove, that the boroughs were well known which should send burgeffes, and that this practice had been long fettled and established, and the method known and antient? Else how could the writ be executed? The instructions are general, that the proper boroughs make their returns; which plainly proves a clear, known, and established usage, and in which there could be no mistake, or disobedience to the writ. This seems a very clear argument of the commons old and undoubted right to be fummoned to parliament.

The demesne lands of the crown, which, in antient times, as Sir Robert Cotton says, was held impious to alienate, were from time to time much leffened and reduced; so that, in the 20th of Edw. III. the revenue of the crown was but one hundred and fifty-four thousand, one hundred and thirty-nine pounds, seventeen shillings and five-pence, as appears from a pell of that king's reign; and this by wars, and other ill management, was brought down in 12 Hen. IV. to amount to no more than forty-eight thousand pounds including the subsidy of wool, and the tenths of the clergy then granted.

When Henry the Fifth first designed and attempted the conquest of France, his income was but fiftyfix thousand, nine hundred and fixty-fix pounds, according to Sir Robert Cotton, and in Henry the Sixth's time, it was funk to five thousand pounds a year, till that notable refumption by parliament of all the crown lands made 28 Hen. VI. Rot. 53.

Thefe

These several gradual deficiencies in the crown revenue gave rise to subsidies to assist the king on his various emergencies: [and they were of different kinds.

In the 13th of Edw. III. Rot. 8. the lords grant to the king the tenth sheaf of all the corn of their demesnes; the tenth sleece of wool, and the tenth lamb, but the commons would only grant upon condition of redressing their grievances.

By 17 Edw. III. Rot. 17. the king was to have a fublidy of forty shillings for every sack of wool over and above the old customs.

By 45 Edw. III. Rot. 10. the fum two and twenty shillings and three-pence was granted on every parish, to make up the sum of fifty thousand pounds. But that being found to be greatly deficient, they laid five pounds sixteen on every parish including the twenty-two shillings and three-pence.

In the 51st of Edw. III. Rot. 19. the lords and commons grant a subsidy by way of poll-tax of four-pence on every man and woman above the age of fourteen.

In the 21st of Rich. II. Rot. 75. a subsidy on the staple commodities was granted to the king for life.

In the 9th of Hen. VI. Rot. 15. twenty shillings of every knights fee is granted, and twenty shillings of every pounds value in land.

By 14 Hen. VI. Rot. 12. two shillings and fixpence in the pound is granted to be paid by every one, who has above five pounds a year in lands, annuities, offices.

By 18 Hen. VI, Rot. 14. a subsidy by way of poll-tax is granted on aliens only; sixteen pence on every house-keeper, and six-pence on others.

In the 32d of Hen. VIII. ch. 50. (Rastal.) there were four fifteenths and tenths granted, and two sub-sidies of twelve pence in the pound on lands; and by aliens who had lands in trust, two shillings were to be paid paid for every pound: this of aliens is mentioned to fhew how the land was held formerly; it being fince resolved in favour of the crown; that the king may have the benefit of such trust, by the decree of a court of equity, as appears from Allen's Reports, fol. 14.

In the year 1641, monthly affeisments on lands were introduced; and in 2 Will. and Mar. the poundrate on lands came in. But of late this tax on lands is called an aid, and is so distinguished.

The principal and chief way of supplying the king was by the grant of fifteenths, of which Lord Coke in his 2d Inft. page 77, gives the following account, viz. " for this gift and grant by the king, of the liberties contained in this great charter " [Magna Charta, chap. 38.] and of others con-" tained in the king's charter of liberties of the " forest, the archbishops, bishops, abbots, priors, " earls, barons, knights, freeholders, and other " the king's subjects, citizens, and burgesses, af-" fembled in parliament, gave unto the king one " Afteenth; which proveth, that, as the fifteenth " was granted by parliament, fo was this great char-" ter also granted by authority of the same; but, " fince this time, the manner of the fifteenth is al-" tered; for now the fifteenth, which is also called " the talk, is not originally fet upon the polls, as at " this time if was, but now the fifteenth is certainly " rated upon every town. And this was by virtue " of the king's commissions into every county of " England. In * 8 Edw. III. taxations were made of all the cities, boroughs, and towns in England, " and recorded in the Exchequer, and that rate was " at that time the fifteenth part of the value of every " town, and therefore retaineth the name of the " fifteenth still. the towns equally. The subsidy is uncertain, be-

" cause it is set upon the person, in respect of his

" lands, or goods, which commonly do ebb and

The fifteenth, Lord Coke, in his 4th Inst. p. 33, fays, amounted to twenty-nine thousand pounds, and the subsidy to seventy thousand pounds. But, for the greater part of Queen Elizabeth's time, the subsidy came to one hundred thousand pounds by the diligence and care of the commissioners appointed by her.

The method of collecting these fifteenths and fublidies was, by commission from the king to two persons who had power to nominate clericum unum, to act with them; and these chief taxors were in each county to call before them a fufficient number of the best men of every city and town, out of whom they were to choose four or fix at their discretion, and to fwear them to make true enquiry what goods each person was possessed of, and to make indentures of the same; one to be delivered to the chief taxors, and the other was to be kept by themselves. And the taxors were to take care to make a true return: and the taxing of the taxors themselves was reserved to the treasurer and the barons of the Exchequer. And the earls, barons, and knights of the shire with the freeholders in each county were by writ directed to them to be affiftant to the taxors.

This was the form observed, as appears from the records of the lord-treasurer's Remembrancer, in the 34th of Edw. I. Rot. 47. 7 Edw. II. Pat. Rot. Mem. 3. So Pat. Rot. 3 Edw, III. part 3. Mem. 18. and from the Pat. Rot. 6 Edw. III. part 3. Mem. 19.

Lord

Lord Coke indeed, in his 4th Inft. 34, and in 2 Inft. 77. (see page 22.) fays, that there was a more exact taxation made in 8 Edw. III. which being returned into the Exchequer, was made the rule and standard ever after. He does not cite any authority, but refers in the margin to the 6th Edw. III. part. 2. num. 26. But there was no fuch taxation that we can find in the 8th of Edw. III. among the records of the lord-treasurer's Remembrancer; nor indeed, can we find from Sir Robert Cotton's Abridgment of the Rolls of parliament of that year, (for the Rolls themfelves have been fince destroyed or lost) that any aid was granted that year; though there is a writ of fummons in Rymer, and Sir William Dugdale for that purpose. But we think Lord Coke grounded himself on the Year-book of 11 Hen. IV. 35. where it is said, that the fifteenth granted 6 Edw. III. being tortiously levied, a commission, issued 8 Edw. III. [probably the writ, ad equaliter taxand. mentioned by Lord Coke, 2 Inft. 77. fee p. 23.] for the county of Somerfet, where the cause of action arose, to make a juster assessment. Nothing is said in that book, but that this might, and did extend only to Somersetshire: and that this taxation was made all over England, we take to be Lord Coke's own inference; for there is nothing of it in the book; nor is there any record of that year among Mr. Petyt's Collections, which is in the Inner-Temple library; as there are likewise many of the forms of taxations in the time of Edw. II. and Edw. III. particularly that of 6 Edw. III. referred to by him in the margin. So that we think Lord Coke was mistaken; and his mistake hath missed some other judges of great abilities and learn-

The clergy too used to supply the king, by granting him a tenth, which Brooke says in his abridgement, title Quinzime 9. was to be levied of their lands. Sometimes the clergy of themselves would give the king money; and what the archbishop proposed was generally affented to by the lower clergy; and the abbots and bishops voluntarily gave what they thought fit. But the most usual way was for the pope to tax them, till Edward the First, in the twenty-third year of his reign, summoned them to parliament by the pramumentes clause, which courfe, with forme interruptions, continued till the middle of Henry the Sixth's time; and then that method of meeting in a parliamentary convention was omitted, and they were afterwards fummoned only as a convocation where they granted their money. The fum agreed on by the lower clergy was presented to the prelates, and they carried it to the archbishop, and being confirmed by him, the parliament, fince the 32d of Hen. VIII. have interposed. and given their grants a full and more authoritative fanction. Each bishop was, as before-mentioned, liable to the collection of the money so granted; and this method continued till the year 1664.

Indeed, Mr. Petyt, in his treatise of the commons' right, page 145, says the bishops were discharged of this trouble in Queen Elizabeth's time; but there is nothing of it in the acts of parliament of the first and thirteenth of her reign, for that purpose.

It is faid, in Lane's Reports, p. 51. that the fuccessor of a bishop shall not be charged for the desiciencies and arrears of a subsidy incurred in the predecessor's life-time, but only his heir or executor. See Moor's Reports, p. 17. For the antient method of granting and collecting these tenths. See Clau. Rot. Dorso, 7 Edw. II. Mem. 3. among the Records, of the Lord-Treasurer's Remembrancer, and to 32 Hen. VIII. chap. 22, 23, in Rastal's statutes.

Another way of supplying the crown, was by granting the subsidies of tonnage and poundage; the foundation of which was the guarding of the seas, that merchants might trade hither with safety; and this has been constantly made the consideration

one principle on the filling tone of granting such subsidies. The Saxon laws put a merchant, who had crossed the seas thrice at his own expence, upon the foot and degree of a Thane, that is, a baron, or nobleman.

The old fund, or tax to secure the seas from pirates, was that called Danegelt, mentioned before. But, in 21 Edw. III. the merchants having been robbed and murdered, there was an ordinance made by the king and peers, that two shillings should be taken of every ton of wine, and six-pence of all goods imported. But this was complained of by the commons as a violation of the law, Rot. 11. and this, it seems, was the beginning of tonnage and

poundage.

In 46 Edw. III. Rot. 15. we find the citizens and burgesses, after the knights of the shire were gone home, granted the like sum on the application of the prince to them. But the first legal grant of it that we can find, was in 47 Edw. III. Rot. 12. when two shillings a ton was granted on wine, and sixpence in the pound on all merchandize coming into the realm, or going out; as was the old parliamentary stile. This serves to correct a passage in Sir John Davis's Reports, p. 11. where he says, tonnage was first granted in the 5th of Richard the Second.

The next grant was that of poundage only, in 2 Rich. II. Rot. 29 and 30. part 1. being fixpence in the pound on all merchandize. At the fame time the parliament granted a subsidy on the staple commodities,

In 5 Rich. II. chap. 3. two shillings tonnage, and fix-pence poundage, were granted.

In 7 Rich. II. Rot. 13. there were two shillings tonnage, and fix-pence in the pound granted.

In 13 Rich. II. Rot. 20. three shillings tonnage, and fix-pence poundage.

In 17 Rich. II. Rot. 12. there were three shillings tonnage, and twelve-pence poundage.

In 2 Hen. IV. Rot. 9. there was only seven-pence poundage, and two shillings tonnage.

In 4 Hen. IV. Rot. 28. there was twelve-pence poundage, and three shillings tonnage.

The like fum was granted, 6 Hen. IV. Rot. 9. and the same sum was given, 1 Hen. 5. Rot. 17.

Lord Coke fays, that in 3 Hen. V. tonnage and poundage was first granted to Hen. V. for life, and he refers to the 50th Roll of that year. This he takes notice of in three different places in his works, and particularly observes, that this was the first leading grant of this kind; as the reader may fee in 12 Rep. 34. 2 Inst 61. and 4 Inst. 32. But the number of the Roll is mistaken, or misprinted: for there are but fixteen Rolls in the first part of that year, and but forty-nine in the fecond; but it is in the first part of the Rolls of that year, Rot. 5. This will serve to correct a mistake of Sir John Davis, and some others of our eminent lawyers, who affirm, that tonnage and poundage was first granted to Hen. VI. for life, in 31 Hen. VI. Rot. 8. And this became a precedent for the demands of all our fucceeding princes.

Edward the Fourth, in the fourth year of his reign, had it for his life, Rot. 24. fo had Henry the Seventh, Henry the Eighth, Edward the Sixth, Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, and King James the First. But Charles the First, unhappily relying on his prerogative, as if tonnage and poundage were the right of the crown, ordered these duties to be collected without a previous grant from the legislature: and this, among other things, created great jealousies and uneasinesses between him and his parliament; fo that he had only occasional and temporary grants of tonnage and poundage. It would be unnecessary to set forth every minute difference, that appears in the grants of these duties by parliament. In many of them there is an exception for the king's prizage wines, that they shall not pay the tonnage duty. But this was unnecessary (unless it were for the benefit of the king's patentee) because the king cannot pay duty to himself. For, tho' the king has paid custom for his wine ever since King William's time; yet that is only curtefy, and he is no ways obliged to do it; as was refolved in the Exchequer, in the case of one Robinson, upon a seizure made on purpose to contest that matter. Some of these old acts have a great affinity with the 12th Charles II. as 9 Hen. VI. Rot. 15. and 4 Edw. IV. Rot. 24.

We are now come to the great statute of 12 Gbar. H. chap. 4. called, the subsidy of tomage and poundage, which is the soundation of the present customs. These duties have been considerably increased by later statutes, and are distinguished by different names, to denote either the quantity or quality of them, or the time when they were granted. The duties granted on merchandize by the twelsth of Charles the Second, are by some called in a more restrained sense, the old subsidy, or customs. Others are known by the name of the new subsidy, one third subsidy, two third subsidy, petty customs, or alien's duty, old and new imposts, new duties, and additional duties. But they all signify only certain charges on goods imported.

The fublidy of tonnage and poundage, which is divided into jublidy inwards, and jublidy outwards, was granted to Charles the Second for his life, and afterwards to King James for his life. At the revolution it was granted to King William only for years; and fo it continued till the 6th of Queen Anne, when half of the customs inwards was granted to the year 1808; and, by I Geo. I. ch. 12. was granted to the king and his heirs for ever. And the other half by 7 Ann. ch. 7. fect. 28. was likewise granted to the queen, and her heirs for ever. The subsidy outwards, by 9 Ann. chap. 6. was granted for thirtytwo years; and by 3 Geo. I. ch. 7. was made perpetual. By an account delivered into parliament, the first fession after the revolution, this tax brought in, on a medium of four years, 577,507 l. 12 s. 10 d. 1 but, according to Dr. Davenant, it brought in 600,000 L free of all charges and deductions. The

The excise called the temporary excise, was granted to King Charles the Second during his life; from whose death it has been continued by several acts of parliament, and now (by 1 Geo. III. cap. 1.) stands continued to his present majesty for his life.

The excise, called the bereditary excise, was granted to King Charles the Second, his heirs and successors for ever, in recompense for the profits of the Court of Wards, purveyance, and the tenures by knight-service, &cc. then abolished by act of parliament. These two excises, according to the above-mentioned account, produced at a medium of sour years, 610,4861. 10 s. 9 d. but, according to Dr. Davenant, they were computed at 666,383 l. clear. A tax of two shillings upon every fire-bearth, &cc. and therefore called the bearth-money, was granted to King Charles the Second, his heirs and successors for ever, which, according to the said account, produced about 200,000 l. but according to the doctor, 245,000 l.

The revenue of the Post-Office, or tax upon letters sent by the post, was granted to King Charles the Second, his heirs and successors for ever; which, by the above account, produced sifty-five thousand pounds; but, according to the doctor, sixty five thousand pounds; and this revenue hath been since increased by an additional tax upon letters, as well as by a more regular and strict collection.

An imposition upon wines and vinegar was granted to King James the Second, from the 24th of June, 1685, to the 24th of June, 1693, towards repairing the navy, which, by both the above accounts, produced 172,900 l. 11 s. 8 d. 4; and which, having been made good by new duties, hath been suffered to expire. An imposition upon tobacco and sugar was granted for the same time, which, by the said accounts, produced 148,861 l. 8 s. 1but it hath been suffered to expire.

An imposition on French linnens, brandies, &cc. was granted from July 1, 1685, to July 1, 1690; which which, according to the faid accounts, produced 93,710 l. 8 s. 1 d. and was likewife fuffered to expire.

These, with several other small branches not worth particularizing, were all the taxes we were subject to at the time of the Revolution, which, at the highest computation, produced but 2,061,856 l. 7 s. 9 d. ½: and yet, with this revenue, King James the Second, supported his civil list, kept a formidable navy ready to put to sea, an army of near thirty thousand men at land, and saved money yearly, if we can credit an account of the issues of his revenue given in to parliament, which amounted to no more, at a medium, than 1,699,365 l. 2 s. 9 d.

At the time of the Revolution, there were no national debts, properly fo called. There was indeed a debt of fixty thousand pounds due to the servants of King Charles the Second, which his fuccessor neg. glected to pay; and the payment of it was provided for by an act of the first session after the Revolution. As to the debt called the banker's debt, tho' charged by letters-patent from King Charles the Second upon the hereditary excise, no provision was made by parliament for its payment, until the 12th of King William, when it was enacted by parliament, that, in discharge of certain annual perpetual payments and arrears thereof, granted by King Charles the Second to several patentees, out of the hereditary excise, the same excise should, from the 26th of December, 1705, stand charged for ever with the payment of three pounds per annum, for the principal fums of the owners, their heirs and affigns for ever. nevertheless redeemable upon payment of a moiety of the principal fums; by which means the nation became charged with a debt of 664,263 l. being the moiety of 1,328,526 l. which these principal sums amounted to, and which is the only debt we are now charged with, that had any part of its rife before the revolution. and as mail done I no m

OF OUR-

A I D S, &c.

PART II.

Taxes sublishing at the end of King William's Reign.

A S our taxes were now become very numerous, it feems necessary to divide them into customs, excises, and inland duties.

By customs, are meant those duties that are payable at the Custom-House upon the importation of goods, and which consist of five several parts, or branches, called, I. The old subsidy, or subsidy inwards. II. The petty Custom, or aliens duty. III. The additional duty. IV. The one per cent. inwards. And V. The composition on petty seizures.

The branch of customs was first granted by 12 Car. II. chap. 4. from the 24th of June, 1660, during the king's life, and was subsisting at the end of King William's reign, under the title of Customs, having been continued till 1766, by stat. 8 and 9 W. III. chap. 20, (See the first part of this history, page 69.) By 6 Ann. chap. 11. the one half of it was continued to the first of August 1808; and from thence for ever, by stat. I Geo. I. chap. 12. and was appropriated for the payment of annuities, amounting to 80,000 l. per annum. for ninety-nine lyears from the 24th of June 1708. The other half, by 6 Ann. chap. 19. was continued to the first of August 1714; and from thence for ever, by 7 Ann. chap. 7. fect. 28. and by I Geo. I. chap. 12. fect. I, 2. 15. This moiety, as also the surplus of the first moiety, after payment of the said annuities, and the whole thereof, after the last day of June 1808, are made part of the AGGREGATE FUND, by that act established.

I. Subfidy inwards, or old subsidy. This duty consists of two distinct parts, TONNAGE and POUNDAGE; which names arise from the different regulations whereby it is imposed and levied. By the act of 12 Char. II. chap. 4: it is called, a tonnage duty on wines imported; being a certain sum of money, payable out of, and charged upon, every ton of wine imported. And it is called a poundage duty on other goods and merchandize imported; because it is regulated by a certain sum, to be paid for the value of every pound, or twenty shillings of goods imported.

II. Petty customs, or aliens duty. This duty is payable by merchant strangers, that is, aliens born, or denizens, on all goods imported, liable to the subsidy of poundage; but goods liable to the subsidy of tonnage, are not liable to this duty; because an equivalent is included in the advanced sum of the several subsidies laid on those goods, when imported by aliens, or in foreign ships.

III. Additional duty. This duty, as well as the old subsidy, is composed of a tonnage and

poundage.

IV. One per cent. inwards. This duty, as well as the old fubfidy, and additional duty, confifts of a tonnage and poundage; being payable in ready money upon all goods and merchandizes liable to those duties, and imported from any port, or place of the Mediterranean Sea beyond the port of Malaga, into any port of Great-Britain, in any ship or vessel that hath not two decks, and doth carry less than 16 pieces of ordnance mounted, together with two men for each gun, and other ammunition proportionable. But by stat. 9 Geo. II. chap. 33. fect. 3. British ships exporting from any of his majesty's dominions, fish taken and cured by his majefty's subjects only, (so that one moiety of their full lading be fish only) are not liable to this duty.

V. Composition on petty Seizures. Though all goods, feized by the officers of the customs for non-payment of duties, are to be profecuted to condemnation, either in the court of Exchequer, or before the justices of the peace, &c. and the king's moiety, or share, paid unto the proper officers, before any writ, or order of delivery may be granted, except in the case of perishable goods; yet, when the seizure is so imall, that the custom thereof does not exceed forty shillings, the commissioners of the customs, have, by their patent, a power to compound for it; and, in that case, the king's part is to be paid to the collector of the port of feizure, who is to account for it by the name of composition on petty seizures, which he is to com. prehend under the general head of customs.

The fecond branch of the public revenue is called, the one per cent. outwards, and was first granted by 12 Char. II. chap. 4. sect. 2. as a part of the subsidy of poundage, and continued therewith to August 1, 1710. By 9 Ann. chap. 6. it was continued to the 8th of March, 1742, and by 3 Geo. I. chap. 7. made perpetual.

The third branch is called the new subsidy, and confifts of a tonnage and poundage. It was first granted by 8 and 9 W. III. chap. 23. sect. 1, 4. from May 1, 1697, to Feb. 1, 1699. It was afterwards, by 9 and 10 W. III. chap. 23. fect. 1. continued from 31 Jan. 1699, during the king's life. By 1 Ann. chap. 7. fect. 2. I Geo. I. chap. I. lect. 2. I Geo. II. chap. I. fect. 2. It was granted during the respective lives of Queen Anne and King George the First and Second; and, by I Geo. III. chap. I. to his present majesty for life; and is, with several other duties in the last mentioned act, to be applied towards the raising of 800,000 l. per annum for the support of his majesty's houshold, and of the honour and dignity of the crown.

The 4th is that called, the impost on wines and vinegar, first granted to King James the Second, from the 24th of June 1685, to June 24, 1693. It was afterwards continued, for short terms, by several acts, and made perpetual by 3 Geo. I. chap. 9. sect. 10. By the 9th of Ann. chap. 21. and 1 Geo. I. chap. 21. this branch, with others in the said 9 Ann. mentioned, was made part of the South-Sea company's original fund, for the payment of their annuity on their capital stock, increased by the said 1 Geo. I. from 9,177,967 l. 15 s. 4 d. to 10,000,000 l. and for the payment of 8,000 l.

per ann. allowed the faid company, by the faid acts, for charges of management.

The 5th, is that called, the impast on tabaeco, first granted to King James the Second, from the 24th of June, 1685, to the 24th of June, 1693. It was continued afterwards by several acts, and made perpetual by 3 Geo. I. chap. 9. This branch makes part of the South-Sea Company's original fund.

The 6th is the impost 1690, first granted upon fifty-five several sorts of goods, by 2 W. and M. sess. 2. ch. 4. sect. 3. (see part 1st, p. 44.) from the 25th of December, 1690, to Nov. 10, 1695. It was afterwards continued by several acts, and made perpetual by 3 Geo. I. chap. 9. sect. 2, 3, 10. It makes part of the South-

Sea Company's original fund.

The 7th is that called the impest 1692-3, farst imposed (upon seventy-two several sorts of goods particularly named, consisting of differ-ferent duties almost upon every sort; and upon all other goods not particularly rated in the first book of Rates, except mum, and goods particularly charged with the former impost, one shilling in the pound) by 4 and 5 W. and M. thap. 5. sect. 2. (see part 1st. p. 50.) from March 1, 1693, to March 1, 1696. It was made perpetual by 3 Geo. I. chap. 9. sect. 2, 3, 10, and part of the South-Sea Company's original fund.

The 8th is called the coinage, first granted by 18 Char. II. chap. 5. sect. 11. from the 20th of December, 1666, for five years. It was afterwards continued by 25 Char. II. chap. 8. sect. 1. I Jam. II. ch. 24. 4 and 5 W. and M. ch. 24. 12 and 13W. III. ch. 11. 7 Ann. ch. 24. 1 Geo. I. chap. 43. 9 Geo. I. chap. 19. 4

The 9th is that called the excise on falt; because it was put under the management of the commissioners of excise; but, as it is paid upon the importation of foreign falt, it is placed under the head of customs. It is a duty of 3 d. per gallon, first imposed by 5 and 6 W and M. chap. 7. fect. 3. and by 7 and 8 W. III. chap. 31. fect. 2. continued for ever. By 9 and 10 W.III. ch. 44. (see part 1st. p. 77.) there was granted a farther duty of 7 d. per gallon, from December 24, 1699, for ever; which, by 3 Geo II. chap. 20. was repealed, after December 25, 1730. But, by 5 Geo. II. chap. 6. it was revived from the 25th of March 1732, for three years. It was afterwards continued by feveral acts, and by 26 Geo. II. chap. 3. made perpetual.

The 10th, is that called the new duty on fpice and pictures, first granted by 6 and 7 W. III. chap. 7. (see part 1st. p. 58.) from May 1, 1695, to May 2, 1698. It was afterwards continued by several acts, and by 11 Geo. I.

chap. 9. made perpetual.

The 11th, is that called the second 25 per pent. on French goods, granted by 7 and 8 W. III. ch. 20. (see part 1st. p. 61.) from Feb. 28, 1696, to Feb. 28, 1717. It was afterwards continued by several acts; and by 11 Geo. I. made perpetual. By 1 Geo. I. chap. 12. this branch makes part of the AGGREGATE FUND.

The 12th, is that called, the new duty on whale-fins, granted by 9 and 10 W. III. chap. 45. fect. 2. from the 10th of July 1698, to

July

July 10, 1706. It was afterwards continued by feveral Acts, and by 3 Geo. I. chap. 9. made perpetual. It makes part of the South-Sea Company's original fund.

The 13th, is that called the new duty on coals, culm, and cinders, first granted by 9 and 10 W. III. chap. 13. from May 15, 1698, to May 15, 1703. It was continued, as usual, and by 5 Geo. I. chap. 19, made perpetual. By 8 Ann. chap. 4. this branch was appropriated for the payment of annuities, amounting to 135, 600 l. for thirty-two years, from the 29th of September, 1710, and for the charges of paying the faid annuities. But, upon the subscription into the South-Sea capital of part of the faid annuities, in pursuance of the 5th of Geo. I. chap. 19. and of other part, in pursuance of the 6th of Geo. I. chap. 4. the faid branch is now part of the South-Sea Company's additional funds.

The 14th, is that called the 15 per cent. on muslins, first granted by 11 and 12 W. III. ch. 3. from March 25, 1700, to September 29, 1701. It was afterwards continued by several acts, and made perpetual by 11 Geo. I. ch. 9. By 1 Geo. I. this branch makes part of the

AGGREGATE FUND.

The 15th, is that called the excise on liquors imported, first granted by 12 Char. II. chap. 23. from the 25th of December, 1660, during the king's life. It was afterwards continued by several acts, during the respective lives of King James II. King William, Queen Anne, King George the First and Second; and by 1Geo. III. chap. 1. it is granted to his present majesty for life. This duty, both in England and Scotland, is under the management of the commissioners of the excise, who generally impower the the collectors of the customs at the several ports to levy it for them; and therefore it is here put under the head of customs.

These, except the duties of prisage and butlerage, (for an account of which, fee part 1st. p. 7.) were the several branches of the customs fublifting at the Revolution. We shall next give the excises sublisting at the end of King William's reign, which were as follow, viz.

The two first, were the temporary and beredi-

tary excises; for which see part 1st. p. 29.

The 3d, was a new excise granted to King William and Queen Mary, their heirs and fuccessors, for ninety-nine years, from Jan. 25, 1692-3, by 4 W. and M. chap. 3. See part ift. p. 48. It was made perpetual by 1 Geo. I. chap. 12.

The 4th was a second new excise granted to them, their heirs and fuccessors, for sixteen years, from May 17, 1697, by 5 W. and M.

chap. 7. See part ift. p. 52.

The 5th was a third new excise, granted to them, their heirs and fucceffors, from the same day, without limitation of time, by 5 W. and

M. chap. 20. See part 1st. p. 53.

The 6th, was an excise upon salt, first granted to them from March 25, 1694, to May 17, 1697, by 5 W. and M. chap. 7. and continued to his majesty, his heirs and successors, for ever, by 7 and 8 W. III. chap. 21.

The 7th, was a second excise upon salt, granted to K. William, his heirs and successors, for ever, by 9 and 10 W. III. ch. 44. See part 1st. p. 77.

The 8th was an excise upon malt, &c. now commonly called the malt tax, first granted to King William, by 8 and 9 W. III. chap. 22. See part ift. p. 72. only ploxy our to

The 9th, was an excise on sweets, granted to King William, until the 25th of March 1706, by 10 and 11 W. III. chap. 21. See part 1st. 181. A vd . 3071 dagu A.

The 10th, was an excise on spirits, or low wines, granted by 12 and 13 W. III. chap. 11. to commence the 25th of March 1701, and to continue until the 25th of March, 1706.

All these are called excises; because they were managed, and collected by the commissioners, and regulated by the laws of excife.

We come lastly to those branches of the public revenue, substifting at the accession of Queen Anne, which we have ranked under the head of inland duties, and were as follow, viz:

I. The Post-Office Revenue, or duty upon letters fent by the post, which having been granted to King Charles the Second, his heirs and fuccessors for ever, belonged to King William in right of his crown, and received no addition during his reign.

2. The feveral small branches and casual profits arising to the crown by wine licences, seizures, &c.

3. The first stamp duty, granted to King William and Queen Mary, for four years, from June 28, 1694, by 5 W. and M. chap. 21. (See part 1st. p. 55.) and continued to Aug. 1, 1706, by 8 and 9 W. III. chap. 20.

4. The duty upon backney coaches, granted to King William and Queen Mary, without limitation of time, by 5 W. and M. chap. 22.

5. The duty on marriages, births, and burials, &c. first granted to King William, for five years, from May 1, 1695, by 6 and 7 W. III. chap. 6. and continued to the first of August 1706, by 8 and 9 W. III. chap. 20.

W. III. chap. 20.

7. The duty on bawkers and pedlars, first granted to King William for one year, by 8 and 9 W. III. chap. 25. It was the next session continued to June 24, 1701, and afterwards continued to June 24, 1706, by 12 and 13 W. III. chap. 11. See part 1st. p. 81.

8. The second stamp duty, granted to King William, his heirs and successors for ever, by

9 and 10 W. III. chap. 25. and aw double sonal

Of these eight branches of inland duties, six were introduced fince the Revolution; and, when we confider that many of these customs. excises, and inland duties, affect the necessaries of life, or at least, the indespensable conveniences of life, as well as some of the materials necesfary for working up our manufactures; and that, when a tax is laid upon any commodity, the dealers in that commodity always do, and indeed must raise the price a great deal more than the tax laid upon it, in order to make good the interest of the money they advance for paying that tax, and the risk they run of losing it by bad debts; we cannot be at a loss to find the true cause of the increase of wages, and the advanced price of all manufactures in this country; without maliciously imputing it to the idleness or extravagance of our people; for the labourer must live by his wages, and he that employs him by his profits; and if by taxes you increase the necessary expence of both, the former must have higher wages, and the latter greater profits, otherwise the one must starve, and the other become bankrupt. The whole amount of the money granted by 1 Ann. the parliament, begun at Westminster the 13th 1701. day of December, 1701, in the 13th year of King William, and first of Queen Anne, as appears from the following acts, is 6,238,628 l. 15 s. 5 d. ½.

An act for granting an aid to his majesty, by laying Chap 5. duties upon malt, mum, cyder, and perry.
[Regranted by 1 Ann. stat. 2. chap. 3.]

By this act a duty of 6 d. per bushel, was laid upon malt; 10 s. per barrel upon mum; and 4s. per hogshead on cyder and perry, to continue from the 9th of March, 1701, until the 24th of June, 1703. The sum borrowed upon this act (interest at 6 per cent.) was 600,000 l. and the net produce of the duty for the time above-mentioned, as appears per account in the Excise office, was 945,150 l. 5s. 4 d. ½. A composition may be made with any person for the said duties on malt not made for sale, at the rate of 5 s. per annum, for every head in the family.

An act for the better support of her majesty's hous- Chap. 7. hold, and of the honour and dignity of the crown.

By this act was established, what has been since called the civil list revenue; and, as it has been, and probably will be, repeated at the beginning of every reign, it seems proper to give a particular account of it. It was enacted by the first section, that from the 9th of March 1701-2, during the life of Queen Anne, the excises substituting at the Revolution, (See C2 p. 8.

p. 8.) should be continued to her majesty, in manner and form, and under the forfeitures mentioned in the acts therein recited, or by any other law in force relating to the excise.

By the 2d, it was enacted, that the tonnage and poundage granted by 9 W. III. chap. 23. should, from the 9th of March, 1701-2, be continued to her majesty during her life.

By the 3d, that the faid two branches, togethe. with the hereditary excise, the revenue of the Post-Office, first-fruits, fines of the Alienation Office, post-fines, wine licences, sheriffs profers, compositions in the Exchequer, and feizures of uncustomed and prohibited goods, the revenue of the Dutchy of Cornwal, and any other revenue arising by the rents of lands in England or Wales, or for fines, for leafes of the same, should be for raising 700,000 l. yearly for the support of her majesty's houshold, and of the honour and dignity of the crown; with a proviso, nevertheless, that the said hereditary and temporary excise, should be subject to the weekly payment of 3,700 l. according to 12 and 13 W. III. chap. 12. (See part 1st. p. 83.) during the term of five years.

By the 4th, it was provided, that after the faid term of five years; so much money as together with the 3 per cent. per annum, (then to commence payable to patentees, by letters-patent of K. Charles the Second *,) should make up the sum of 3,700 l. per week during her majesty's life, should be taken out of the hereditary excise, and the excise thereby granted, and the said 3 per cent. per annum, being deducted out of the hereditary part, the rest of the 3,700 l. per week, should be disposed of to the public use and service.

The remaining sections of this act contain several very proper and necessary regulations for preventing the alienation of any of the crown revenues.

As by this act a revenue was established during her majesty's life, for the support of what is now called the civil lift; as foon as her majesty had given the royal affent to this and the other acts then ready, (March 30, 1702.) She made a speech to both houses, in which, after returning thanks for this fettlement, (which was no more than what had been fettled upon her predeceffor in time of peace.) She told them, "That " fhe would take great care it should be ma-" naged to the best advantage; and, while her " subjects remained under the burthen of such " great taxes, she would straiten herself in her " own expences, rather than not contribute all " the could to their ease and relief, with a just " regard to the support of the honour and dig-" nity of the crown: that it was probable, the " revenue might fall very short of what it had " formerly produced: however, she would " give directions, that 100,000 l. should be " applied to the public fervice in that year, out " of the revenue they had so unanimously given " her." From hence we may conclude, that Queen Anne, for the first year of herreign, (and for the following years during the war, as this contribution was annually made by her majesty) had not 600,000 l. for defraying the whole expence of her civil lift; whereas that expence, from the Revolution to the beginning of her reign, had amounted to about 660,000 yearly, one year with another, An

Chap. 12. An act for granting an aid to her majesty, by divers subsidies, and a land-tax.

By this act the sum of 1,979,931 l. 19s. 1d, was to be raised within the year, from March 25, 1702, by a land-tax of 4s. in the pound. The sum borrowed upon it was 1,800,000 l. at 6 per cent. per annum interest. And the surther sum of 800,000, (to be raised within the year from the 25th of March, 1702, (was borrowed at 6 per cent. per annum upon the following subsidies.

This act recites, that several bills of credit, commonly called Exchequer bills, were made forth, and iffued by divers acts of parliament, which were made, and passed in the reign of King William; and that the several branches of the public revenue mentioned in the faid acts, were deficient in the whole to the amount of 2,338,628 l. 15 s. 5 d 4, besides interest due, and to grow due; therefore the tonnage and poundage granted by 12 Char. And, by sect. 16. it was enacted, that the produce of the several branches by this act continued, meaning the produce from August 1, 1710, together with the said overplus (if any should be) should be appropriated to make good the said deficiency, amounting to 2,33,8628 l. 15 s. 5 d. \(\frac{3}{4}\); and interest due, and to grow due thereon.

By this act the tax upon lands was to be 4 s. in the pound, proportioned as formerly upon the feveral counties, &c. and the commissioners. were named in the act, being all land-holders, as usual, though it was then well known, that very few land estates were affested at near the full value, and most of them at less than half; fo that, according to computation, it was reckoned at less than two millions; whereas, if that opportunity had been laid hold of to introduce a new affessment, the crown impowered to appoint commissioners, and those commissioners armed with fufficient powers, the tax would probably have produced double that fum. --By this act the sum of 1,976,931 1. 19 s. 1 d. was to be raifed within the year, from the 25th of March 1703, to be paid quarterly. This act recites, that by 4 W. and M. chap. 3. (See part 1st. p. 48.) certain rates, or duties of excise upon beer, ale, and other liquors, were imposed during the term of 99 years, from the 20th of January, 1692, and made liable to the payment of feveral annuities, which were to be purchased in the form thereby prescribed: and that by an act 5 W. and M. chap. 20. (See part 1st. p. 53.) two seventh parts of other duties of excise upon beer, ale, and other liquors, thereby granted to their majesties, their heirs and fuccessors, are made liable to the payment of other annuities, which were to be purchased in the manner and form thereby prescribed: and that, by virtue, or in pursuance of the said feveral acts, and another act, 5 W. and M. chap. 5. (See part 1st. p. 51.) for supplying the deficiency of the money raised by the act first above-mentioned, several annuities were purchased at divers rates, for one, two, or three lives: and that feveral of the faid annuities were fo purchased (and whereupon no reversion, or further estate, or interest, hath been purchased, and which have not been changed into a certain term of years, in pursuance of any subsequent act, or acts of parliament, in that behalf) determined by the deaths of fuch contributors.

Now the Commons grant a further aid to arise by contributions for annuities to be purchased, &c. and enact, that any persons (being her majesty's natural born subjects) may pay into the Exchequer any fum of money not exceeding 79,155 l. Chap. 19. An act for taking, examining, and stating the public accounts of the kingdom.

Whereas many and great aids, and provifions, have been given, raised, and assigned for the necessary defence of the crown, and these kingdoms, and for the support of the government: to the end therefore, that both your majesty, and the whole kingdom, may be satisfied, and truly informed therein, be it enacted, &c. that William Bromley, esq; Thomas Coke, esq; Sir Godirey Copley, bart. Robert Byerley, esq; Henry St. John. esq; Francis Scobell, esq; and Sir William Drake, bart. shall be constituted commissioners for taking the accounts of all money of the public revenue of the crown, &c.

In this session the commissioners of accounts, appointed by an act of the former, presented to the house a representation, narrative, and observations upon the public accounts, whereupon address, or rather remonstrance to her majesty, was agreed to, and presented by the whole house, Feb. 12, 1702-3; which is a piece that ought to be studied carefully by every man in the kingdom, but is too long to be inferted here; and therefore we shall only observe, that in this remonstrance, they complain (amongst other things) against the Earl of Halifax, then auditor of the Exchequer, for not transmitting regularly the imprest rolls to the remembrancer of the Exchequer, by which the latter was prevented from fuing fuch accomptants as were in arrear; against the Earl of Ranelagh, late paymaster, for not accounting for upwards of twenty-one millions sterling; and against Jacob Vanderesche, esq; paymaster to his then late majesty's Dutch forces, they complain in thefe words:

"That he hath received 3,025,753 l. 9 s. 6 d. which, by computation, is 52,907 l. 6 s. 9 d. 4 more than the pay of those troops could have amounted to, if they had been always compleat, no deductions made from them, and upon an English establishment, which all of them were not: and yet the said Vanderesche hath passed no account at all; and, tho often summoned, hath never appeared before the said commissioners of public accounts, but stands indebted to the said troops, in 112,229 l. 9 s. 8 d. which is now demanded as an arrear due to them from your majesty and the public."

From these and the like complaints they observed, that the great debt which lay upon the nation, and all the arrears which were owing to her her majesty's forces, did not arise so much from the desiciencies of the funds, as for want of care in the management, and sidelity in the application of them.

The House of Lords likewise entered into an enquiry into the public accounts, and defired that the commissioners, who were members of the House of Commons, might have leave to be examin'd before their committee; but the commons, after fearching precedents, did not think fit to consent to it. However, their lordships ordered the report of their proceedings to be printed at the end of the session; and even from their own report it appears, that the designo their inquiry was to justify the Lord Halifax; and to flew that there had been as great neglects in the public offices before the Revolution as afterwards; but, at this distance of time, it is impossible to judge of the truth of the facts contested between the two houses; only we must observe, that the Earl of Ranelagh, who had been expelled the House of Commons, and 'Squire Vanderesche, do not seem to have had one friend in the House of Lords; for there is not one word in their report about either of them.

An act for granting an aid to ber majesty by a land- Chap. 1. tax, to be raised in 1704.

By this act (which passed in the House of Commons, nemine contradicente) a tax of 4 s. in the pound was continued for one year more, upon all lands, tenements, and hereditaments, personal estates, annuities, pensions, and offices. The loan upon it was 1,850,000 l. at 5 per cent.

An act for granting an aid to her majesty, by conti-Chap. z. nuing the duties upon malt, mum, cyder, and perry, for one year.

The loan upon this act was 650,000 l. at 5 per cent. per annum.

An act for granting an aid to ber majesty, for car-Chap. 3. rying on the war, and other her majesty's occasions, by selling annuities at several rates, and for such respective terms, or estates, as are therein mentioned.

By this act, the 3,700 l. per week, payable out of the hereditary excise, by 12 W. III. ch. 12. (See part 1st. p. 83.) and 1 Ann. sess. 1. chap. 7. for five years, was mortgaged for 99 years, from March 25, 1704, in order to raise 1,018,867 l. 18 s. 6 d. by the sale of annuities for ninety-nine years, at sisteen years purchase, 900,000 l. of which was to be applied to the use of the war, and 118,867 l. 18 s. 6 d. to pay the annuities, until the 25th of December 1703 inclusive; and also to raise 300,000 l. more for the use of the war, together with what should be necessary to discharge the annuities till the said 25th of December 1705 inclusive.

§ 9, 10, 11. Persons may advance 1,018, 867 l. 18 s. 6 d. for purchasing annuities for hinery-nine years, at fifteen years purchase; and for raising a surther sum of 300,000 l. persons may purchase annuities for one life at nine years purchase, for two lives at 11 years purchase; three lives at twelve years purchase, or for ninety-nine years, at 15 years purchase, to commence from March 25, 1704.

Chap. 9. An act for granting to her majesty an additional subsidy of tonnage and poundage for three years; and for laying a surther duty upon French wines condemned as lawful prize, and for ascertaining the value of unrated goods imported from the East-Indies.

This is commonly called the one third fubfidy; and was granted for three years, from March 8, 1703-4, and together with an additional duty of 151. per ton, for all French wines condemned as prize, was made a fund for borrowing 300,000 l. at 5 per cent. interest.

These were all the provisions made by this session; but the Committee of ways and means resolved on, and the house agreed to, several other provisions, which the parties interested had weight enough to prevent being carried into execution; for December 12, it was resolved, that a duty of 12 d. a gallon, over and above all other duties, should be laid upon all wines, in the hands of the retailer for three years, and to extend to fuch wines as retailers had then in their hands; and January 3, it was refolved, 1st, That all grants of lands, tenements, hereditaments, and pensions, from the 6th of February 1684 (the day King Charles the Second died) should be resumed. 2dly. That all ferjeants at law, barrifters, attornies, follicitors, and all public notaries and scriveners, or persons practising as such; and every chancellor, commiffary, official, and register, and every advocate, proctor, apparitor, and persons practifing as fuch; all preachers and teachers in separate congregations; all brokers to merchants, and all factors, and other persons acting by commissions from merchants, or others; and all and every person, or persons, practising the art of physic, or furgery; and all and every person, and persons, exercising any other profestions whatsoever, not being such professions as were chargeable to the land-tax, under the head of offices, should pay a tax of 4 s. for every 20 s. which he, she, or they, should or might, by estimation, receive, perceive, or take, for, or by reason of such, his, her, or their, practices, or professions, for one year. And 3dly, That a further tax should be laid upon offices, penfions, and falaries.

Upon these resolutions, bills were, as usual, ordered to be brought in, but none of them had the good fortune to be passed into a law: even the said second resolution of January 3, though such a regulation had formerly been inserted in the land-tax act, yet now could not obtain a place in that bill, the same having been before passed into a law, or in any other bill that was passed into a law; the reason of which probably was, because it had never produced any thing worth while; and indeed it never can, whilst the commissioners are named by parliament, and the assessor publicly known; which will always be the case, unless our landed gentlement should, at last, for the sake of their country and their posterity, agree to a new assessment, and a strict scrutiny being frequently made into the yearly value of their own estates. We say for the sake of their posterity, for, should our commerce and manufactures be lost, by the burdens, dangers, and difficulties they are now exposed to, our lands will not only be greatly lessened in value, but will, by our losing our superiority at sea, become an easy prey to some foreign invader.

4 Ann. 8 1705; 51 Chap. 6. An act for continuing an additional subsidy of tonnage and poundage, and certain duties upon coals, culm and cinders, and additional duties of excise, and for settling and establishing a fund thereby, and by other ways and means, for payment of annuities, to be sold for raising a further supply to her majesty, for the service of the year 1706, and other uses therein mentioned.

The Commons, duly confidering her majefty's great occasions for money to carry on the present war, and having regard, as well to the great burden of taxes now lying upon her majefty's subjects, as to the present condition of the public funds, and the present incumbrances thereupon, are therefore desirous, by such easy and effectual ways and means, as in this act are expressed and intended, to raise a sum of money, not exceeding, in the whole, 2,575,761 l. 16 s. 2 d. and such further sum of money, as will be sufficient, during the first two years of the term herein after mentioned, to compleat the payment of the annuities to be purchased upon this act, &cc.

By this act, one third part of such, or the like several and respective duties, as by the act, 9 and 10 W. III. chap 23, were granted to him during his life, and which, by 1 Ann. stat. 1. chap. 7. are continued to her during her majesty's life, for and upon any kind of wine or wines, and for and upon all manner of goods and merchandizes, which, after the 8th of March 1706, at any time during the term of 98 years, shall be imported, or brought into this realm, shall be continued to her majesty, her heirs, and fucceffors.

§ 4. All fuch duties, as by 9 and 10 W. III. 4 Annchap. 13. (fee part 1st. p. 75.) were charged 1705, upon the several sorts of coal and culm therein mentioned, and the duty upon cinders, imposed by 10 and 11 W. III. chap. 21. (see part 1st. p. 79.) which duties upon coals, culm, and cinders, were continued by 1 Ann. stat. 2. ch. 4. from May 14, 1700, until May 15, 1708, shall be continued until the 30th of September, 1710.

§ 6. The excise on beer, granted by 5 and 6 W. and M. chap. 7. (see part 1st, p. 52.) shall be continued from May 17, 1713, during 95 years. [Made perpetual by 1 Geo. I. stat. 2.

chap. 12. fect. 8.]

§ 20. All the monies arifing for the said several subsidies of tonnage and poundage, coals, culm, and cinders, and the said several rates and duties of excise, together with the sum of 280,000 l. after mentioned, or so much of the said subsidies, &c. as shall be sufficient for answering the full and due payment of all the annuities to be purchased upon this act, shall be the general sund for payment of the same, and shall be charged therewith, and liable thereunto, and shall not be diverted to any other use, intent, or purpose whatsoever.

§ 21. And for the raising any sum, or sums of money, not exceeding, in the whole, the sum of 2,855,761 16s. 2 d. that is, 2,575,761 l. 16s. 2 d. thereof, for carrying on the present war, and 280,000 l. residue thereof, to be applied, with the produce of the said subsidy of tonnage and poundage, for making good, or compleating the quarterly payments herein after mentioned, &c. it is enacted, &c. that any person

person may advance the said sum, for purchasing annuities for 99 years, from March 25, 1706, at 15 years and a half purchase, or 1551. for 101. per annum; which annuities shall not exceed in the whole sum of of 184,242 l. 14 s.

To find the frugality of this way of raising money, let us consider what the world would say of a landed gentleman, who should mortgage his estate, not only for the sum he then wanted, but for an additional sum for enabling him to pay the interest to grow due yearly, without being obliged to contract his yearly expence, in order to save money for the payment of that interest. Would not every one think such a gentleman in the high road to suin?

Chap. 12. An all for laying further duties on low wines, and for preventing the damage to ber majesty's revenue by importation of foreign cut whalebone, and for making some provisions as to the stamp-duties and the duties on births, burials, and marriages, and the salt duties, and touching million lottery tickets, and for enabling her majesty to dispose of the effects of William Kidd, a notorious pirate, to the use of Greenwich Hospital, and for appropriating the public monies granted in this session of parliament.

This act recites, that certain excise duties were granted by 12 and 13 W. III. chap. 11. (see part 1st, page 81.) and continued by 3 and 4 Ann. chap. 4. from the 24th of March, 1706, until the 24th of June, 1710, and grants further duties on low wines, &c. over and above the former. [Farther continued for 96 years, by 5 Ann. ch. 19, and made perpetual by 1 Geo. I. stat. 2. ch. 12. sect. 8.]

As her majesty was not enabled to borrow 4 Ann. any money upon this act, it is probable, that 1705. the duty had not answered the money formerly borrowed upon it, and therefore the duty was continued for another year, to make good the deficiency, fo that this act cannot properly be reckoned to have granted any money, unless what relates to Kidd's forfeiture, which amounted to 6472 l. 1 s.

On January the 8th, the House approved of two resolutions of the Committee of ways and means, for laying a tax upon all lands, tenements, hereditaments, and pensions, granted by the crown fince the 6th of February 1684; and that this tax should be a fifth part of the value of the grant at the time it was made, and ordered that a bill should be brought in for this purpose; but the ministers, as well as others. were too much interested to allow such a bill to be passed into a law.

the property of the faid governor and company of merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, equal to the property which would then remain to the other members of the faid English company trading to the East-Indies; and that the whole trade, which might, or should be carried on during the term of feven years, to be reckoned from the date of that indenture, to and from the East-Indies, and the other parts within the limits aforefaid, for, or in respect of their several stocks and funds thereby agreed to be united, should be for the benefit and behoof of all the members of the faid English company trading to the East-Indies, proportionable to their shares in the capital or principal flock thereof; and, that the faid governor and company of merchants of London, trading to the East Indies, should have a right and power equal to the rest of the members of the faid company, in the direction, management, and carrying on of the faid trade, during the faid term of feven years; and that, after the end, or expiration of the faid term of feven years, the whole trade to the East-Indies, and other, the parts within the limits aforefaid, for, or in respect of their united stock and fund, should for ever (subject to the redemption of the faid fund by parliament) be wholly managed and carried on by the faid Englith company trading to the East-Indies, by whatfoever name the same should then be called .- And to that end and purpose, many covenants, conditions, and agreements, were contained in the faid indenture, as by the fame may more fully appear. And whereas the united stock of the faid governor, and company of merchants of London

London trading to the East-Indies, in their 6 Ann. own names, or in the names of others in trust for them, doth at this time amount to 1,992, 800 l. part of the sum of 2,000,000 l. mentioned in 9 and 10 W. Ann. cb. 7. fest. 29.

Prize wines were made liable to a duty of 251. per ton, and all prize goods were made liable to other duties; and upon the credit of the duties, or subsidies granted, or continued by this act, or by the said act of 5 Ann. chap. 27. after satisfaction of what had been charged upon them, her majesty was enabled to borrow 729,067 l. 158. 6 d. 3, together with such sums as should be sufficient to pay the interest of the said sum at 6 per cent. quarterly, till the duties should become sufficient for that purpose.

Chap. 22.

An act for continuing several duties therein mentioned, upon coffee, chocolate, spices, pictures, and muslins, and additional duties upon several of the said commodities, and certain duties upon callicoes, china wares, and drugs; and for continuing the duties called the two-third subsidies of tonnage and poundage, for preserving the public credit; and for ascertaining the duties of coals exported for foreign parts; and for securing the credit of the Bank of England; and for passing several accounts of taxes raised in the county of Monmouth; and for promoting the consumption of such tobacco, as shall have paid her majesty's duties.

The duties mentioned in the title of this act, which had been continued by 3 and 4 Ann. chap. 4. were continued from the 23d of June, 1710, for four years next ensuing; and the faid two-thirds subsidy, imposed by 3 and 4 Ann. chap. 5, was continued from the 7th of March, 1708-9, for three years next ensuing.

Thefe

These duties were continued, not for raising 6 Ann. any supply for the ensuing year, but for what 1707, was called preserving public credit; because it then appeared, that the produce of them, in the time for which they had been before granted, would not satisfy the principal and interest of the sums borrowed upon them; therefore regularly a state of their produce should have been laid before the committee of supply, the desiciency from thence calculated, and a sum granted for making good that desiciency, which sum should have been provided for in the committee of ways and means, by continuing those duties.

The whole amount of the money granted by 7 Ann, the parliament held at Westminster, the 16th ¹⁷⁰⁸. day of November 1708, as appears from the following acts, is 6,698,839 l.

An act for granting an aid to ber majesty, to be Chap. 1. raised by a land-tax in Great-Britain, for the Service of the year 1709.

This land-tax was 4 s. in the pound, and the loan upon it was 1,880,000 l. at 5 l. per cent.

7 Ann. 1708. Chap. 3. An act for charging and continuing the duties upon malt, &c. for the service of the year 1709.

The loan upon this act was 650,000 l. at 6 l. per cent.

Chap. 7. An act for enlarging the capital stock of the Bank of England, and for raising a farther supply to her majesty, for the service of the year 1709.

By this act a new agreement was established with the Bank; which was conditionally made before, or foon after the meeting of the parliament; and, being laid before the parliament, by way of a proposal from the Bank, the same was approved of, first, by the committee of ways and means, and on the 10th of February by the house, whereupon an address was resolved on, that her majesty would issue a commission under the great seal, for taking subscriptions for enlarging the capital stock of the Bank, to enable them to comply with the propofal they had made, and the House had ac. But, that the reader may the more cepted. eafily understand the terms of this proposal, it feems proper to give him a short state of the affairs of the Bank, as they then stood.

By the 5th of Will. and Mar. chap. 20. the capital flock of the Bank confifted of 1,200,000l. being the fum then lent by them to the government, for which they were to have an annuity of 100,000 l. till repaid, and till then they were to continue a corporation; but the corporation was to cease upon twelve months notice after the 1st of August 1705, and repayment of the faid fum, and all arrears of the faid 7 Ann. annuity. By 8 and 9 W. III. chap. 20. the 1708. Bank was empowered to encrease their capital, in order to enable them to pay off tallies, or orders upon feveral deficient funds, and they were to have an annuity at the rate of 81. per cent. upon all fuch as they did pay off, in proportion to which their capital was to be increafed, which was not to be redeemed till after the 1st of August, 1710, upon twelve months notice, when, upon repayment of all that was due to them, the corporation was to cease; and by this act it was provided, that during their continuance, no other Bank was to be erected, or permitted by act of parliament; but this was the only exclusive privilege as yet granted. Thus the affairs of the Bank stood until 5 Ann. chap. 13, when the Bank undertook to circulate 1,500,000 l. in Exchequer Bills, in consideration of which they were to have an annuity of 4 l. 10 s. per cent. till paid off: and to enable them to circulate those bills, they were empowered to make what call they pleased for money from their proprietors, and were to continue a corporation till those bills should be paid off and cancelled; after which, that is to fay, by an act of the very next fession, the money paid in upon this call was converted into capital flock, fo as that the whole addition made to the original capital, by the last mentioned act of King William, or by this act, should not exceed 1,001,1711. 10 s. --- But in this last act there was a proviso, that it should not restrain the corporation from calling in from their members, any further fum, or fums of money.

The History of Taxes, ac.

Thus we may fee, that at the beginning of this fession, the capital stock of the Bank 2mounted to 2,201,1711. 10 s. for 1,200,000 l. of which they had from the government, an annuity of 100,000 l. and as to the refidue, they had an interest at the rate of 8 l. per cent. per annum, for all the tallies, or orders which they had paid off, by virtue of the faid act of 8 and o.W. III. chap. 20. and which were still remaining in their hands unredeemed; and befides, they had an interest of 4 l. 10 s. per cent. per ann. for all the Exchequer bills iffued by virtue of the faid act of & Ann. chap. 13. none of which, as will presently appear, had yet been discharged, or cancelled; but, on the contrary, a great addition made to them, by the new bills iffued quarterly, for paying the interest, or premium, as it became due.

This was the state of their affairs at the beginning of this fession, and now they offered to pay off, and deliver up to be cancelled, all the Exchequer bills iffued by virtue of the faid act of 5 Ann, chap, 13, amounting with interest to 1,775,027 l. 1175. 10 d. 2. 2dly, To advance and lend to the government 400,000 l. without any interest after the 1st of August. 1711, but were to deduct at the rate of 6 l. per cent, interest from the day the money was advanced until the faid 1st of August, fo that for this 400,000 l. they were to have interest for the first two years, but none afterwards. And adly, they offered to circulate new Exchequer bills to the amount of 2,500,000 l. In confideration of all this, they were to have liberty to double their capital by new subscriptions, at fuch rate as they thought fit. 2dly, They were to have an annuity of 106,501 l.13s. 5d. being at the rate of 61. per cent. per annum, for the 7 Ann. 1,775,027 l. 17 s. 10 d. 1, which they were to 1708. advance for cancelling the faid old Exchequer bills; the 41. 10s. per cent. per annum, formerly allowed them for circulating those bills being now to cease. 3dly, The new Exchequer bills were to carry an interest 2 d. per cent. per diem; and over and above, they were to have 3 per cent. per annum, from the time they should be iffued till the day they should be difcharged. 4thly, They were to continue a corporation, and enjoy their first fund of 100,000 l. per ann. until the 1st of August, 1732; but, upon twelve months notice after that day, and payment of all then due to them, their corporation and annuity were to cease. 5thly, No new Exchequer bills, were, without their confent, to be iffued, until all now iffued, should be discharged. And, 6thly, No company in partnership, exceeding the number of fix perfons, were, during their continuance, to be allowed, to circulate bills, or notes payable on demand, or at any time less than six months.

These terms being accepted by the House, and her majesty's commission issued, in pursuance of their address, subscription-books were opened for adding 2,201,171 l. 10 s. to their capital, at the rate of 115 l. for every 100 l. capital stock, which was near the price their stock then sold for, and the subscription was instantly filled; so that from henceforth their capital amounted to 4,402,343 l. and from what is above we may see, that they had now a very large revenue coming into them weekly from the government, besides the profits they made by banking.

Now,

7 Ann.

Now, as to the fund fettled by this act, for rasing this additional revenue to the Bank, for paying the interest to grow due upon these new Exchequer bills, and for discharging and cancelling them by degrees, the duty on houses, which had been continued for ever by the 5th of Ann. chap. 13, was appropriated to the payment of the faid annuity of * 106,501l. 13 s. 5 d. and as a fund for the new Exchequer bills. the subsidies of tonnage and poundage, called the two-third fubfidies, and the duties upon coffee, cocoa nuts, chocolate, cocoapaste, tea, nutmegs, cinnamon, cloves, mace, and pictures, mentioned in stat. 6 Ann. chap. 22. viz. those granted by 3 Ann. chap. 4. and the further rates imposed upon white callicoes, porcelane, called china wares, and drugs, which are hereby made perpetual, and the half subsidies granted by 5 Ann. chap. 27. and 6 Ann. chap. 19, and hereby made perpetual, viz. half the old subsidy; and all monies, which shall arise of the other half subsidies, continued by 6 Ann. chap. 11. over and above the annuities charged thereon, shall be a fund, as well for paying all fuch monies as shall be due for interest on the Exchequer bills, and for the premium of 3 l. per cent. per annum, and for raifing the yearly fum of 200,000 l. for paying off the faid bills+. But, as these duties were then

Thus for four or five years, we were to borrow money quarterly, to pay the interest growing due upon the principal sum now borrowed, and that interest to be quarterly converted into principal, bearing an interest at the rate of 6 l. per cent. the interest of which interest was again at the end of next quarter, to be converted into principal bearing interest; and fo from quarter to quarter, until the appropriated fund should become sufficient to anfwer the same. A most frugal way of raising money for the public fervice, and worthy the wisdom of the nation! But any thing rather than put the people out of conceit with the war, by loading them with new taxes; and all the ufurers, both public and private, were fond of this method of carrying it on.

tinued to Aug. 1, 1716; and, after payment of what had before been borrowed upon them, were made a fund for issuing new Exchequer bills to the amount of * 612,739 l. in case the Bank should agree to circulate the same upon the like terms as in the former act, in which case, the general fund, established by the former act, was likewise to be a collateral security for these new bills. And the duties thus continued by this act, were also to be a fund for borrowing 645,000 l. at 6 per cent. together with such sums as should be necessary to borrow, for paying the interest to grow due quarterly, till these duties should become free, and sufficient to satisfy the same.

The faid bills carry an interest of two pence per cent. per diem, and the Bank was allowed a premium of 3 l. per cent. per ann. for circulating and exchanging for ready money the faid bills, after they have had a currency in the revenue or taxes, and shall have been re-issued at the Exchequer.

Chap. 24. An act for continuing the former acts for the encouragement of the coinage, &c.

By this act the duties, continued by 4 Ann. chap. 22. were further continued, from March 1, 1708-9, for seven years, and to the end of next session; and the Treasury was empowered to issue the following sums out of the coinage duty, besides the 3,500 l. formerly allowed,

^{*} But by indenture between the Earl of Godolphin, lord high-treasurer, and the Bank of England, bearing date the 28th of September, 1709, the Bank agreed, in pursuance of a resolution of a general court, to circulate but to the amount of 400,000 l.

The prizes (No. 3,752, in the act 3,750) to be paid half yearly, at Lady-day, and Michaelmas, amounted to 32,625 l. yearly. The blanks (No. 140,248 in the act 146,250) at 14 s. per blank, to be paid at Michaelmas yearly, amounted to 102,373 l. 12 s. per annum.

The contribution-money was to be paid into the Exchequer on or before the 1st of Sept. 1710; and an interest of 8l. per cent. per annum, to be allowed the contributors from the time of actual payment, until the 29th of September 1710; and the receivers to be allowed by the Treasury, not exceeding one penny in the pound, for what paid by them of the said contribution-money into the Exchequer. —The books for receiving subscriptions to this lottery, were opened on the 20th of January, 1709, at Mercer's Chapel, and above 600,000 l. were subscribed that day, and the remainder about the end of March following.

8 Ann. 1709. Chap. 7. An all for granting to her majesty new duties of excise, and upon several imported commodities, and for establishing a yearly fund thereby, and by other ways and means, to raise 900,000 l. by sale of annuities, and (in default thereof) by another lottery, for the service of 1710.

By this act, a new excise was laid upon beer, ale, and other liquors, and an additional duty over and above all former duties, upon spice, raisins, and snuff, for establishing an annual fund of 81,000 l. on which was to be raised 900,000 l. by the sale of annuities for 32 years at the rate of 9 l. per cent. and if this whole sum should not be subscribed before the 1st of May, 1710, then the residue to be raised by such another annuity lottery as that just mentioned. Consequently this excise and duty was to continue from Lady-day 1710, for thirty-two years.

Chap. 9. An act for laying certain duties upon candles, and certain rates upon monies to be given with clerks and apprentices, towards raising her majesty's supply, for the year 1710.

By this act, a new duty, over and above all former duties, was laid upon all candles imported, and an excife upon all candles made in Great-Britain, by which a new and very numerous body of people were made subject to the laws of excise, and a most heavy burden was laid upon all our manufactures. This duty and exise commenced May 1, 1710, and were by this act to continue for five years; and, by the same act, a tax was laid upon all sums received cived with clerks or apprentices, to commence 8 Ann. at, and to continue for the same time. upon all these together, her majesty was enabled to borrow 500,000 l. at 6 l. per cent. we find, that in this fession, our ministers and members found themselves under a necessity to impose some new taxes; but they took care, that these new taxes, were such as fell more heavy upon the poor or middling fort of people, than upon the rich. --- Upon the question in the committee, for laying a duty on candles, ayes 77, noes 50. And upon the queftion to agree with the committee in the faid refolution, ayes 123, noes 82. --- Upon the question in the committee for laying a duty upon houses throughout Great-Britain, ayes 132, noes 111. An act for continuing several impositions, additional Chap. 13: impositions, and duties upon goods imported, to raise money by way of loan, for the service of the year 1710; and for taking off the over-sea duty on coals exported in British bottoms, &c.

By this act, the impost on wines and vinegar, the impost on tobacco, the impost 1690, the impost 1692; and the duties on whalefins, continued by 7 Ann. chap. 8. to the 31st of July, 1716, were further continued, until the 1st of August 1720; and upon this remote fund, her majesty was enabled to borrow the sum of 1,296,552 l. 9 s. 11 d. \(\frac{1}{2}\) at 6 l. per cent. but, as this fund stood engaged for monies already borrowed upon it, to the said 1st of August, 1716; K.

I. chap, 13, until the faid 1st of August, 1716, were also appropriated to pay the interest upon this fum to grow due in the mean time, fo far as the furplus would amount to; and, in case of no furplus, or not fufficient, the Treasury were impowered to borrow money quarterly at 61. per cent. to make good the faid interest; fo that, if this falt duty produced no furplus, we were to pay a quarterly compound interest for this present sum of 1,296,552 l. a most frugal and eafy way of procuring ready money! which shews how greatly the nation stands obliged to those bonest gentlemen who lent their money upon fuch terms.

The loans to pay the interest on the above loans, till the said fund should take place, were as follow, viz. for and until the 25th of March, 1711, computed, according to 9 Ann. chap. 11. at 74,875 l. 19 s. 1 d. \(\frac{1}{4}\), for and until the 25th of December 1711, computed at, (as per the said 9 Ann. ch. 21. on the sum of 1,371,428 l. 9 s. 1 d. that is, 1,296,552 l. 9 s. 11 d. \(\frac{1}{4}\), and 74,875 l. 19 s. 1 d. \(\frac{1}{4}\).) 61,714 l. 5 s. 7 d.

This land-tax was 4 s. in the pound, and the loan upon it was 1,880,000 l. at 6 l. per cent.

Chap. 3. An act for charging and continuing the duties upon malt, &c. for 1711.

The loan upon this act was 650,000 l. at 6 per cent.

Chap. 6. An act for reviving, continuing, and appropriating certain duties upon several commodities, to be exported; and certain duties upon coals to be water-borne, and carried coastwise; and for granting further duties upon candles, for 32 years, to raise 1,500,000 l. by way of lottery, for the service of 1711, &c.

By this act the subsidy outwards, on several goods exported, (which had continuance until the 1st of August 1710, by 1 Ann. sess. 2. ch. 13, and by 5 Ann. chap. 18.) was revived, and further continued, from the 8th of March 1710, until March 9, 1742, except such duties as were formerly granted to be paid upon the exportation of sea coals for parts beyond the seas, instead of which other duties are hereby imposed. The following duties on coals exported, were granted for the same time, viz. coals of Wales, or the West of England and Scotland, exported to Ireland, or the Isle of Man, the chalder containing 36 bushels, Winchester measure,

II. chap. 5, and revived and continued by fundry acts, to the 25th of March, 1710, &c. was revived and continued from the 8th of March, 1710, until the 9th of March 1742. The duty of one per cent. outwards on goods exported in certain British ships to the Mediterranean, beyond Malaga (first granted by 14 Char. II. chap. 11, and continued by the feveral acts, which continued the old subsidy of tonnage and poundage,) was likewise continued until the time above-mentioned. The duty of 5 s. upon every woollen cloth exported, granted by 6 Ann. chap. 8. without limitation, was continued to the fame time. All which duties were appropriated for establishing a fund of 135,000 l. per annum, on which was to be raifed, for the public fervice by way of lottery, at 101. a ticket, the fum of 1,500,000 l. And, as in this lottery, the blanks were in 32 years to have their whole money repaid with 6 l. per cent. interest till repayment, therefore a further fum of 428,570 l. was charged upon this fund, to be divided as directed among the fortunate tickets, and to be paid to them in 32 years, with the like interest till paid, so that the public were thus for ready money to pay, besides interest, a premium of above 28 l. 11s. 5d. per cent. and yet to get it even at this rate, we were obliged to make use of that bane of industry and frugality called a lottery.

Chap. 7. An act for enabling and obliging the Bank of England, for the time therein mentioned, to exchange all Exchequer bills for ready money upon demand, &c.

> By this act, the Bank were obliged to circulate all the Exchequer bills then out-standing, that is to fay, to pay the principal and interest due upon them when demanded, and also all the Exchequer bills that were to be iffued quarterly, for the payment of interest upon sums before borrowed on the security of anticipated funds; and that, whether these bills had before had a currency in the Exchequer or no; and for this fervice they were, by this act, to have 45,000 l. paid them annually, until fo many of these bills should be discharged and cancelled, as should reduce them to 1,900,000 l. which annual premium of 45,000 l. they were to have, besides the 3 l. per cent. for circulating them, and this premium was fecured to be paid them out of any of the unappropriated funds of this fession, until July 31, 1714, and from that day out of the duties arising by the acts, 7 Ann. chap. 7. and 8 Ann. chap. 1. before any money could be referved for cancelling any of the Exchequer bills, as provided by the former This act therefore put money of these Acts. into the pockets of those who had bought up Exchequer bills at a discount, and made an addition addition to the annual expence of the public, 9 Ann. but provided nothing for the current service. 1710.

An act for establishing a general post-office for all Chap. 4. ber majesty's dominions, and for settling a weekly sum out of the revenues thereof, for the service of the war, and other her majesty's occasions.

By this act the Post-Office was put under a new regulation, and the postage of letters more heavily taxed; but a weekly sum of 700 l. was reserved for the public use for 32 years, from Michaelmas 1711; and a third part of the produce of the said office over and above 111,461 l. 17 s. 10 d. which was the produce of the same in the year, ending at Michaelmas 1710, and over and above the said 700 l. a week, was also reserved for the public use.

An act for laying certain duties upon hides and Chap. 24. skins, tanned, tawed, or dressed, and upon vellum and parchment for the term of 32 years, for prosecuting the war, and other her majesty's most necessary occasions.

The duty upon leather, granted by 8 and 9 W. III. chap. 21. (see part 1st, p. 71.) had been allowed to expire after the three years for which it was granted; as also the duty upon paper, vellum, and parchment, granted by 8 and 9 W. III. ch. 7. (see part 1st, 64.) after the two years for which it was granted; the first, because it was burthensome to the poor, and the second, because it was a discouragement to learning. But now our necessities were grown so great, that the first, with several improvements was revived, and also the second, so far-

9 Ann. as related to vellum and parchment; and both were now granted for 32 years, from June 24, 1711. But both were, in several respects, different from the former duties, and the home duty, or rather excise, was by this act put under the management of commissioners, and officers, to be appointed for the purpose, who, by the act, were to have the fame powers as the commissioners of excise. This act therefore not only increased our taxes, but the number of placemen, and the number of persons subject to the laws of excise.

Chap. 12. An act for laying a duty upon hops.

By this act a new duty of 3 d. per pound was laid on all hops imported, and an excise of 1 d. per pound on all hops growing in Great-Britain, to continue for four years after June 1, 1711; and upon this duty and excise her majesty was empowered to borrow 180,000 l. at 6 l. per cent. Thus, at last, many of our country farmers, and all dealers in hops, were brought under our laws of excise; but, as to the management, the duty was intrusted to the commissioners of the customs, and the excise to those of excise.

Chap. 13. An att for taking, examining, and stating the public accounts of the kingdom.

Whereas many great aids and provisions have been given, raifed, and affigned for the necesfary defence of your majesty and these kingdoms, in this great and important war, and for the support of the government; to the end therefore, that both your majesty, and this subole whole kingdom may be fatisfied, and truly in- 9 Ann. formed, that the same have been applied to the 1710. uses and purposes for which they were granted; may it please, &c.

An act for making good deficiencies, and satisfying Chap. 21. the public debts; and for erecting a corporation Origin of to carry on a trade to the South-Seas, and for the Sea comencouragement of the fishery, &t.

The preamble to this act recites, that notwithstanding the many and great supplies granted to her majesty for carrying on the present war, the following debts and deficiencies are computed to remain still due and unprovided for, that is to fay, the fum of 5,130,539 l. 5 s. 5 d. for the debt of the navy, to the 20th of September, 1710 (exclusive of the debt for the register of the seamen;) the sum of 154,324 l. 15 s. 8 d. 1 for the office of ordnance, to the 29th of September 1710; the fum of 425,721 l. $ s. 4 d. 4, for transport service, to the 29th of September 1710; the fum of 1,018,6561. 17 s. 9 d. 1, for the principal and interest-money, to the 29th of September, 1710, on army and transport debentures; the sum of 12,025 l. 1 s; for the principal money and interest, to the 29th of September, 1710, of deficient tallies, and orders for money lent on 8 W. § 8. After all the principal and interest, which, by the last mentioned act, are charged on the duties on candles, and rates on money given with clerks, apprentices, and servants shall be paid off; all the monies which shall arise by the said impositions on candles, and monies given with clerks, &c. shall be paid into the receipt of the Exchequer, for the purposes in this act.

§ 25. It shall be lawful for her majesty, by letters-patent, to incorporate all persons intitled to any of the public debts, desiciencies, or sums of money, provided for by this act, with power to choose their governor, directors, and other officers; and the persons so incorporated, shall be capable in law to purchase and retain, to them and their successors, lands and hereditaments, not exceeding the yearly value of 1000 l.

§ 34. If it appear, that the joint stock of the company shall amount to more than 9,471,325 l. so that the annuity for the same, shall amount to more than 568,279 l. 10 s. then there shall be added to the said annual sum, so much more as shall make the same amount to 6 per cent. per ann. upon the whole capital stock, and such additional annuity shall be chargeable upon the faid funds.

$ 35. Over and above the faid annual fum, there shall be paid to the faid company, the further annual sum of 8000 l. for charges of management out of the fame funds.

Thus a very large debt was paid, and some of the current supplies provided for, without raising any money; but even this project, ingenious as it was, cost the public a good deal more than the interest to be paid yearly; for, as many of the tallies and orders, especially those issued by virtue of the said 8 Ann. chap. 13. were in the hands of the treasurers, or paymasters of some of the public offices; and, as they were empowered to subscribe them into the stock of the said company, which stock, or a great part of it, was afterwards sold out at a great discount, that whole discount was a loss.

This practice always has, and always will, grind the face of the poor, to fill the pockets of the rich.

An act for granting to her majesty several duties Chap. 22.

about the dities of London and Westminster, and suburbs thereof, and other purposes therein mentioned.

By this act a new duty, over and above all other duties, was laid upon coals, brought into the river Thames, and appropriated to the building 50 new churches, in and about London and Westminster. This duty, was 2 s. per chalder or ton, from May 14, to September 29, 1716, and 3 s, per chalder or ton, from September 28, 1716, to September 29, 1724; on which fund the crown was enabled to borrow money, without limitation, at 6 per cent. and to pay the interest out of the money borrowed, till the commencement of this fund; so that we could not now even build churches without borrowed money for paying interest upon money borrowed

By this act the crown was impowered to appoint commissioners, who after Midsummer, 1715, were to regulate and license, for 22 * years, 800 hackney coaches, land 200 hackney chairs, within the bills of mortality, the former to pay monthly a tax of 5 s. a week, and the latter quarterly 10 s. a year each. By this act likewise a stamp duty was laid upon debentures for drawbacks, bills of lading, wine and alehouse licences, almanacks, cards, and dice, for 32 years after Aug. 1, 1711; and a duty of 9 s. per ton, on all rock falt exported to Ireland, for 32 years +, after the 11th of June 1711; and a duty of 9 s. per ton on all rock-falt exported to Ireland, for 32 years after the 11th? of June 1711. Thus in the fame fession we were again reduced to the necessity of a lottery, and besides interest, to pay a premium of above 30 l. per cent. for ready money.

The loan upon this act was 650,000 l. at 6 l. per cent. And there are two clauses in this act, one for applying 1915 l. 11 s. 6 d. part of the coinage duty, to make good the loss upon the coinage of plate brought into the Mint to be coined; and the other for applying 2700 l. 5 s. 3 d. 2, part of the same duty, to make good the loss upon the recoinage of the old money, current in Scotland before the union.

By this act a duty of 2 d. per pound was imposed upon all soap imported into Great-Britain; and 1 d. per pound upon all soap made within the same, from June 10, 1712, until June 11, 1744. --- Question to agree with the M committee, that a duty be laid on all foap imported into, or made in Great-Britain; ayes 81, noes 52. --- A petition being offered from Woolborough in Devonshire, relating to this duty; and several members acquainting the house, that they had petitions of the like nature; question, that it ought be brought up; negative. Question, that the petition of the soapmakers of London be brought up; negative.

By this act new duties were likewife imposed on paper, pasteboards, milboards, and scaleboards, imported into Great-Britain, or made within the same, granted from June 24, 1712, until June 26, 1744, a new dutyon paper printed, painted, or stained, in Great Britain; to serve for hangings and other uses, for the same time; a duty of 30 per cent, ad valorem, upon all books, prints and maps, imported, bound or unbound, into Great-Britain, was granted for the same time, &c. &c. And by this act all our foap-boilers, paper makers, and callicoe printers, were subjected to the laws of Excise, and the crown was impowered to appoint no less than three new fets of commissioners, one for the excise on home-made soap, one for that on home-made paper, and one for that on homemade callicoes, with fuch fubordinate officers as they might think necessary for each board and each collection. All these duties, except a small duty upon cards and dice, made before June 12, 1711, and the duty upon 100 additional hackney chairs, were granted for establishing a fund of 168,003 L per annum, for paying off in 32 years, the principal fum of 2,341,7401. with interest at 6 l. per cent. and if ever any deficiency, the same to be made good out of the first aid, afterwards granted by parliament. By this act new and additional duties were laid upon the goods mentioned in the title; and a new body of people, namely, our starchmakers, for fale, or not for fale, and wiredrawers, were subjected to the laws of excise, and to two new fets of commissioners and officers to be appointed by the crown, one for levying this excise upon starch, and the other for that on wire. All these duties were granted for 32 years, from Aug. 1, or June 16, or July 1, 1712, in order to establish a fund of 168,003 l. per annum, for paying off in 32 years the principal sum of 2,341,990 l. with interest at 61. per cent. And here too it was provided, that if there should ever be any deficiency, it should be made good out of the first aid, to be afterwards granted by parliament; notwithstanding which fecurity, no more than 1,800,000 l. was upon this fund to be raifed for the public fervice, by a lottery at a 100 l. a ticket, confequently for this fum in ready money, we were to pay a premium of 541,990 l. which is above 30 per M 2

As a clause of appropriation was now become usual at the end of every session, a long clause was inserted in this last act, by which the supplies granted in this session were very particularly appropriated; but after that were two clauses, one in savour of the South-Sea company, and another in savour of the annuitants, who had purchased upon the act of 6 Ann. chap. 5. by which it was provided, that no appropriation should hinder the payment of the annuity due to the said company, or making good the desiciencies of the quarterly payments to the said annuitants, incurred before the 25th of December, 1712.

It is remarkable, that the commissioners for taking, examining, and stating the public accounts, having reported several practices relating to the affairs of the army, and laid feveral dispositions before the House for proving those practices, Robert Walpole, esq; (fince E. of Orford) was expell'd the House, and committed to the Tower, for receiving 500 guineas, and a note for 500 l. more, on account of two contracts for forage for the troops quartered in Scotland, made by him when secretary at war; and Adam Cardonnel, esq; secretary to the Duke of Marlborough, was expelled the House, for taking a gratuity of 500 gold ducats annually, from the contractors for bread and bread waggons for the army in the Low Countries; and Jan. 24, it was refolved, 1st, That the taking of feveral fums of money annually, by the Duke of Marlborough, from the contractors for furnishing the bread and bread-waggons for the army in the Low-Countries, was unwarrantable and illegal.

These, and such like proceedings, seemed to indicate a resolution to establish a new fund, by obling numbers of people to refund; but they were carried no surther; so that if there was any spoil, the spoilers have ever since continued in the quiet enjoyment of it, and the nation to this day without any redress, no parliament having since spirit enough to tell the king, as Richard the Second's did, "That he would find, in the confiscation of the mismanagers estates, wherewithal to answer the occasions of the state."

By this act the Treasury was impowered to iffue new Exchequer bills to the amount of 1,200,000 l. which bills were to carry an interest of 2 per cent. per diem to the bearer, and the Bank undertook and were obliged to circulate them, for which they were to have 3 l. per per cent. annum, payable weekly, and a further yearly fum of 8000 l. payable quarterly, which quarterly payments, together with 45,000 1. agreed to be paid them by 9 Ann. chap. 7. were to be continued without diminution, until no 12 Ann; more than 1,900,000 l. of all these new and old 1713. bills, should be standing out, and uncancelled. With regard to the payment of this new debt, it was charged upon the general fund established by 7 Ann. chap. 7. and out of the same general fund, a yearly finking fund of 270,999 l. 78. including the 200,000 !? established and appropriated to pay off and cancel the Exchequer bills charged upon it; with a proviso, that if this general fund should, in any one year be deficient for answering all these purposes, that deficiency should be made good out of the next aids granted by parliament. But, as most of the branches of this general fund were not yet free from the mortgage made of them before the faid 7 Ann. chap. 7. therefore the fame power was now again given to the Treasury, as was given by that act, namely, to compute quarterly what was grown due for interest and premium, for satisfaction of the same, until the faid general fund should become free, and applicable to the uses by this and the said act of 7 Ann. chap. 7. intended and directed. Thus, for gaining a little popularity to our ministers, and a little ease to our land-holders, we were to pay a quarterly compound interest of above 61. per cent. for the money we were thereby obliged to borrow, which fort of interest always equals the principal in about ten years.

By fect. 27. of this act, her majesty was impowered to appoint, by letters-patent, the annual sum of 35,000 l. to be issued weekly, or quarterly out of the civil list revenue for 32 years, from Michaelmas 1713, to be paid as she should direct, to such persons as should advance the sum of 500,000 l. for paying off the

And, to the disappointment of usurers, it was provided by sect. 34. of this act, that if any of the original creditors of the civil lift had fold and affigned the debt, or arrear due to them, they might, at any time, within fix months after the end of that fession, redeem the same, upon paying back the principal fum really advanced for such fale, with interest at 6 per cent. from the time it was advanced.

> Upon report from the commissioners for stating the public accounts, it appeared to the House, that William Churchill, esq; a member of the House, had, while he was a commisfioner for fick and wounded feamen, referved to himself half the profits to arise on some of the contracts made by that board; on which the following resolution was agreed to nem. con.

That, for any commissioner, or other person entrusted by her majesty in making contracts for public services, to be a partner in such contract, or to referve a share for any other person, is an high breach of trust, and a notorious corruption. This was on May 7, and May 16, upon a report from the same commissioners, it appeared to the House, that Thomas Earl of Wharton, had received 1000 l, for procuring a place for a gentleman, both therein named, on which it was refolved, that the giving or taking money for procuring offices relating to the management of the public revenue, is a scandalous corruption, and highly detrimental to the public. debts

Taxes sublifting at the end of Queen Anne's Reign.

THESE may be properly divided into customs, excises, and inland duties. Customs we call those duties, that are paid by the importer, and are under the management of the commissioners of the customs; excises are those duties paid by the manufacturers, or retailers, and are under the management of the commissioners, and governed by the laws of excise, or under particular commissioners, armed with the powers of excise. And inland duties we call those which are paid by the retailers, but are under the management of particular boards of commissioners, with officers appointed for collecting them.

The customs consist of the following branches,

- I. That properly called customs, which, as mentioned in part 2, consist of five several parts, viz.
- 1. The old subsidy, or subsidy inwards, first granted by flat. 12 Char. II. chap. 4. and continued as to one half thereof, to August 1, 1808, by 6 Ann. chap. 11. and, as to the other half for ever, by 7 Ann. chap. 7. This is a tax of 61. per ton upon some wines, and 41. 10 s. upon others; and on perry, rape, cyder, and vinegar, imported into the port of London, by British subjects in British ships, navigated according to law; and upon all other goods fo imported, it is a tax of 51. per cent. ad valorem; as to which it is observable, that when goods are to pay any tax according to the value, that value is to be ascertained by the two books of rates, or, if not there rated, by the oath of the importer, or by the price at a public fale; and when goods are valued by the oath of the importer, the officer may take the goods, paying the importer the price he puts upon them, with 10 l. per cent. profit, and the produce at a public fale, after all disbursements for duties, &c. is to be paid to the crown, for the use of the finking fund.

by alien or denizen importers, granted and continued by the same acts, and is a fourth more than the former.

3. The additional duty, granted and continued by the same acts, being an additional duty of 3 leper ton on some wines, and 4 le on all others; and a moiety of the neat old subsidy, by way of additional duty upon all wrought siles, except East-Indian; and upon all linens, except Irish and calicoes; and I d. per pound on tobacco of the British plantations.

4. The one per cent. inwards, granted by the act 14 Char. II. chap. 11. and continued by the faid two acts of Queen Anne, being a tax of 1 l. per cent. ad valorem, upon all goods imported from any place in the Mediterranean beyond Malaga, in any British ship that hath not two decks, and carries less than 16 guns mounted, with two men for each gun, and ammunition proportionable. The design of this tax is to oblige our merchants to make use of desensible ships, in order to prevent our seamen being made slaves by the Barbary pirates; but ships exporting British sish are excepted.

5. The composition on petty seizures; which is an indulgence allowed by custom to oun Custom-house officers; for one moiety of all goods seized and condemn'd belongs to the crown, and must be paid, or secured before the officer can have the goods to sell; but, when the duty of the goods seized, does not exceed 40 s, the officer is allowed to compound with the collector.

II. The fubfidy outwards, first granted by the said act, 12 Char. II. chap. 4. and continued to March 8, 1742, by 9 Ann. chap. 6. being a tax of 5 l. per cent. upon all goods exported, with several exceptions, and now most goods are exempted, except dying goods, and several others necessary in our manufactures, and except leather, white woollen cloths and coals, which pay particular duties after mentioned.

III. The one per cent outwards, being the same, and first granted by the same act, with B 2

Ann. chap. 6. to March 8, 1742.

IV. The duty on tanned leather exported, being a duty of 1 s. per hundred weight, first granted by 20 Char. II. chap. 5. and by 9 Ann. chap, 6. continued for 32 years, from March 8, 1710.

V. The impost on wines and vinegar, first granted by 1 Jam. II. chap. 3. and by 9 Ann. chap. 21. continued for ever; being an additional tax of 8 l. per ton on all vinegar and French wines, and 12 l. a ton on all other wines.

VI. The impost on tobacco, first granted by I Jam. II. chap. 4. and by the last mentioned act of Queen Anne, continued for ever, being an additional tax of 3 d. per pound on tobacco of the British plantations, and 6 d. on all foreign tobacco.

VII. The coinage-duty, first granted by 18 Char. II. chap. 5. and by 7 Ann. chap. 24. continued to the end of the first session of parliament, after March 1, 1715-16, being an additional tax of 10s, per ton on all wines, vinegar, cyder, beer, brandy, and strong waters, imported.

VIII. The coal duty, first granted by I Jam. II. chap. 15. and by 8 and 9 W. III. chap. 15. continued to September 29, 1716. It was at first 1 s. 6 d. per chalder on coals imported, or brought coast-ways into the port of London; but, by the act which continued it, was reduced duced to 1 s. and it was first appropriated to the building St. Paul's, London; and, by the said 2d act, to the finishing that church, and repairing St. Peter's, Westminster.

IX. The impost 1690, first granted by 2 W. and M. sess. 2. chap. 4. and made perpetual by 9 Ann. chap. 21. It is an additional tax of 55 different kinds, upon as many different forts of goods imported, many of which are necessary in our manufactures; such as pot ashes, brimstone, candles, cordage, drugs even for dyers use, unwrought iron, oil, hemp-seed, raw silk, starch, steel, beaver wool, wood, &c. and the tax is generally at least 5 per cent. advalorem.

X. The impost, 1692-3, first granted by 4 and 5 W. and M. chap. 5. and by 9 Ann. ch. 21. made perpetual. It is likewise an additional duty of 72 different kinds, upon as many different forts of goods particularly named; and upon all other forts of goods not particularly rated in the first book of Rates, except mum, and except goods particularly charged with this or the faid impost 1690; it is a general additional tax of 51. per cent. ad valorem. By this tax also many forts of goods that are necessary in our manufactures, are particularly charged; fuch as rough amber, wood ashes, lamp-black, dying woods, except those particularly excepted, elephants teeth, rough flax, furs, goats hair, rough hemp, hides, incle, indico, iron, leather, rosin, salt not used in curing sish, tar, tow, &c. and all French goods in general, except wines, (hereby particularly charg'd with 8 1.

XI. The falt duty, first granted by 5 and 6 W. and M. chap. 7. and by 7 and 8 W. III. made perpetual. It is an additional tax of 3 d. a gallon upon all falt imported; and was put under the management of the commissioners of excise; but, as it is paid upon importation, and collected by the officers of the customs, it is here stated as a branch of our customs.

XII. The new duty on spices and pictures, first granted by 6 and 7 W. III. chap. 7. and by 7 Ann. chap. 7. made perpetual. It is an additional duty of 5 l. per cent. ad valorem, upon pictures, cinnamon, cloves, mace, nutmegs; and upon tea fs. cosses 6 d. cocoa 6 d. and chocolate is per pound.

XIII. The second 25 per cent. on French goods, first granted by 7 and 8 W. III. chap. 20. from Feb. 28, 1696, to Feb. 28, 1716-17; being an additional tax of 25 l. per ton on French wines; 30 l. on single, and 60 l. on double French brandies, 15 l. on French vinegar, and 25 l. per cent. ad valorem on all other French goods; so that by this and the said 9th branch, all French goods were subjected to a duty of 50 l. per cent. over and above all other duties.

XIV. The new duty on coals, culm, and cinders. This and the next branch were at first both granted together; but, as they were afterwards divided and appropriated to different purposes, it seems necessary to state them separately. Both these branches were first granted by 9 and 10 W. III. chap. 13. and extended to cinders by 10 and 11 W. III. chap. 21. being an additional duty of 7 s. 6 d. per chalder, and 5 s. per chalder, and 3 s. 4 d. per ton, on coals carried coastways from one port of England to another, 1 s. per chalder on culm, and 5 s. per chalder on cinders. This duty having been continued to September 30, 1710, three-fifths of it was from thence continued to September 30, 1742, by 8 Ann. chap. 4.

XV. The additional duty on coals, culm, and cinders, first granted as mentioned in the foregoing branch; and, as to the other two fifths, continued to March 8, 1742-3, by 9 Ann. chap. 6.

by 8 and 9 W. III. chap. 23. and by 1 Ann. chap. 7. continued to the queen during her life; being an additional tax upon wines, and all goods imported equal to the old subsidy, with very few exceptions.

XVII. The new duty on whale fins, first granted by 9 and 10 W. III. ch. 45. and by 9 Annichap. 21. continued for ever, being an additional tax of 3 d. per pound weight on those imported by the Greenland company, and 6 d. per pound on those imported by others.

custom liereditatily to the crown

XVIII. The further duty on falt, first granted by 9 and 10 W. III. chap. 44. for ever, being an additional duty of 7 d. per gallon on all falt imported. This duty was likewise to be under the management of the commissioners of excise; but it is here stated as a branch of our custom's for the reason assigned, with respect to the former duty on salt; see branch XI.

XIX. The fifteen per cent. on muslins, first granted by 11 and 12 W. III. chap. 3. and by 7 Ann. chap. 7. continued for ever, being an additional tax of 15 l. per cent. ad valorem, on muslins; under which general name are comprehended 25 different forts of goods imported from the East-Indies. This tax was at first laid upon almost all other forts of Indian manufactures; but they were soon after prohibited to be worn in Great Britain, and freed from this tax.

XX. The excise on foreign liquors imported; as to which we need add nothing to what we have faid in the second part of this history, page 7.

XXI. The duties called prisage and butlerage; the former of which was payable by all natives, importers of wines, except the merchants of London, Southampton, Chester, and the Cinque Ports, being one ton, if ten tons or more, and under 20, be imported, and two tons if 20 tons or more be imported by one ship; and the latter is payable by all foreigners, importers of wine, in lieu of prisage, being 2's. per ton on the quantity imported; which duties belong by custom hereditarily to the crown. See part 1st, pr.

ed into the port of London, first granted by I Ann. sess. 2. chap. 12. from May 15, 1708, to May

May 15, 1716, being an additional tax of 2 s. per chalder, or ton, and appropriated to the same purpose as the eighth branch of the customs before-mentioned. This tax, together with the said 8th branch, were continued to the 28th of September 1724, and from the respective times of their expiration, appropriated to the building 50 new churches, by 9 Ann. chap. 22.

XXIII. The one-third subsidy, first granted by 2 and 3 Ann. chap. 9. and by 6 Ann. chap. 5. continued to March 8, 1806-7; being an additional tax upon all wines and merchandize, imported equal to one third of the old subsidy.

XXIV. The additional duty on spice and pictures, and new duty on drugs, first granted by 3 and 4 Ann. chap. 4. and by 7 Ann. chap. 7. continued for ever. By this branch an additional duty of 5 l. per cent. ad valorem is laid upon all spice, and 20 l. per cent. on all pictures (for sale or private use) imported; on drugs, 10 l. per cent. ad valorem on some, and 4 l. per cent. on others; on cossee, tea, and chocolate, an additional duty equal to that in the 11th branch; on china ware, 12 l. per cent. as sold at the public sale; and on white calicoes, not charged as muslins, on Indian dimities, and on all other manufactures of cotton, 15 l. per cent. as sold at the public sale.

XXV. The two thirds subsidy, first granted by 3 and 4 Ann. ch. 5. and by 7 Ann. ch. 7. continued for ever; being an additional tax on all wines and merchandize imported, equal to two-thirds of the old subsidy; but several sorts of goods are exempted from this duty.

These were our customs subsisting at the end of Queen Anne's reign; and from this short flate of them we may fee, what a labyrinth our merchants must be in; but, if we consider the many exceptions, and exceptions from exceptions the many regulations, and regulations of regulations, for collecting those customs, and for paying the drawbacks upon goods re-exported, we must conclude it impossible for any merchant in this country to be master of his business, if he be what we call a general merchant; consequently he must trust to those honest gentlemen called Custom-house officers, both for the duties he is to pay upon importation, and the drawbacks he is intitled to upon exportation. Can we wonder at the decay of our commerce under fuch circumstances? Should we not rather wonder that we have any left!

Now, with regard to our excises subsisting at the end of her reign, they were as follow, viz.

I. That called the temporary excise, first granted by 12 Car. II. ch. 23. and by 1 Ann. ch. 7. continued to her majesty during her life, being 15 d. per barrel upon every barrel of beer or ale, abave 6 s. the barrel, and 3 d. per barrel, for every barrel of 6 s. or under, brewed for retail; 15 d. for every hogshead of cyder or perry sold by retail; 1 d. for every gallon of strong water, or aqua vita, &c.

II. The hereditary excise, granted for ever, by 12 Char. II. ch. 24. being the very same with the former. See part 1st. p. 29.

they were as follow, viz.

IX. The apprentice duty, first granted for 5 years from May 1, 1710, by 8Ann. ch. 9. being duty of 6 d. per pound for all sums paid, or agreed to be paid, with clerks or apprentices, and, if the fum to be paid, or agreed to be paid, exceed 50 l. the tax is then I s. per pound; but apprentices put out by the parish, or by any public charity, are excepted.

X. A third stamp duty, first granted for 32 years, from Aug. 1, 1711, by 9 Ann. ch. 23. being a stamp duty on some things not before charged, viz. debentures, 8 d. bills of lading, 4 d. almanacks, on one sheet, 1 d. if on more, 2 d. per ann. wine licences, 4 s. alehouse licences, I s.

XI. The duty on cards and dice, made or imported here, first granted by the same act for 32 years, from June 11, 1711, being a duty of 6 d. per pack of cards, and 5 s. per pair of dice

XIII. A fifth stamp duty, first granted for 32 years, from August 1, 1712, by 10 Ann. ch. 26. being an additional stamp duty of 2 s. 4 d. upon every volicy of insurance of any kind what-foever.

XIV. A fixth stamp duty, first granted for 32 years, from Aug. 2, 1714, by 12 Ann. sess. 2. ch. 9. being an additional stamp duty of 5 different kinds, upon a great variety of deeds and writings therein mentioned.

XV. The civil list tax, first granted for 32 years, from Michaelmas 1713, by 12 Ann. sess. 1. ch. 11. being a tax of 35,000 l. per ann. on the civil list revenue. We shall afterwards assign the reason why we charge this as a tax upon the people.

XVI. To these we shall add the land-tax; for, though this tax was never granted for above a year at a time, yet as it was annually granted, and was subsisting at the death of Queen Anne, we may reckon it among our inland duties; and, it is almost certain, that we shall be subject to it as long as we are liable to any tax whatsoever. This tax, at least in its present form, was granted in the beginning of King William's William's reign, and continued from that time, at 1 s. 2 s. 3 s. or 4 s. in the pound, until the last year of Queen Anne, when, by 12 Ann, sess. 2 ch. 1. an aid was granted to her majesty to be raised by a land-tax of 2 s. in the pound for the year 1714, beginning as usual, March 25.

Thus we have at last made an end of our long lift of taxes, which were sublisting at the end of Queen Anne's reign; but there were feveral others, that like noisome meteors, made their appearance for a year or more, and then vanished. These we have forborne to mention, because, we believe, the reader will be, by this time, as heartily tired of reading, as we are of collecting and writing such a disagreable scroll as that we have now given. Let him consider then what the people must be who are to pay these taxes, and on account of these taxes made liable to an infinite number of pains, penalties, and hardships; besides being in many cases deprived of that which is the glory of Englishmen, to be tried by God and their country; and fure to fuffer the utmost rigour of justice for an innocent act made criminal by law, if they have ever, upon any occasion, behaved like a freeborn Briton, or disobliged a revenue commisfioner, or a neighbouring justice of peace: whereas, if they have behaved like what placemen call quiet and good subjects, they may expect what mitigation they please, which these commissioners, or justices, are impowered to grant.

If the wars we engaged in were absolutely necessary; and, if it was absolutely necessary for us to carry them on in the manner we did, furely every man in England, had he foreseen

the consequence, would have submitted to a just and equal pound-rate upon his revenue, or annual income, whether from land, trade, or business, rather than subject the trade and people of his country, to fo many dangers and difficulties, by obliging our rulers to raise money by taxes upon consumption. This would have been for the particular interest of every man in the kingdom; for it may be demonstrated, that from a pound-rate of 2 s. in the pound only, if justly and equally affested, and effectually carried into execution, we should, with moderate taxes upon luxury, fo as not to occasion smugling, have raifed more money annually, than the war cost us, even in the lavish manner it was carried on; whereas it is now generally admitted, that every man in the kingdom, one with another, pays 10 s. on account of our taxes upon confumption, for every 20s. he fpends yearly for the support of himself and family, so that every man is a great lofer by our method of raising money for the public service, except misers and hoarders of money.

But when that which we now call a land-tax was first thought of, there were many errors in the methods proposed for carrying it into execution, particularly that of laying the whole upon the landlord, whereas one moiety only should have been laid upon the landlord, and the other upon the tenant. We know it will be faid, that a tax upon the tenant is really a tax upon the landlord, because it disables the tenant from paying such a high rent as he otherwise might; but does not a tax of equal amount upon consumption produce the same effect? In this respect therefore they are equal;

what then must be the consequence of a tax on confumption of quadruple the amount? and, in general, we ought to consider, that a tax, like every other burden, is the more eafily borne, the more shoulders you put it on, unless you put it on fuch shoulders as cannot bear any part of it; for then you are obliged to bear the bearer as well as his share of the burden; which will always be the consequence of laying taxes upon workmen, labourers, and fervants, or upon any thing they must necessarily consume: for fuch taxes only ferve to enhance the price of labour, and confequently the price of every thing thereby produced, which of course lessens our exportation, and injures every branch of our trade.

We could point out many other mistakes; but shall now only add, that we believe they were defigned. We believe fome of the courtiers of those days designed, that this method of raising money should not prove effectual, in order to reduce us to the necessity of taxing confumption: 1. because such taxes must always be heavy upon trade, fisheries, and manufactures, and confequently prevent our being fuch formidable rivals to the Dutch: and 2dly, because fuch taxes increase the power of ministers, and give them the absolute disposal of large sums of money, as they have the power not only of naming the officers employed in the collection, but of appointing what number of officers, and what falaries they think fit. These are our reafons for being of fuch an opinion; and the then Marquis of Hallifax feems to have been of the fame opinion, as appears from a tract of his published in the the history of England, by an impartial hand, vol. 2. p. 467, which piece, as well as the history, we must recommend to the reader's perufal.

The delign of the court therefore being to render taxes upon confumption necessary, they gave themselves ho trouble about the affersment that was to be made, in order to raile money by a pound-rate, but, on the contrary, connived at most of the lands in the kingdom, being affelfed at less than half their yearly value, and at affelling stock in trade, instead of affelling the yearly profits made by trade, or any other fort of employment; as to both which, indeed, they were warranted by the practice of former times; but the circumstances of the nation were now very different. In former times, I mean before the restoration, or rather before the civil wars in King Charles the Fift's reign, annual taxes were not necessary. Our aids and subsidies, tenths and fifteenths, were granted only upon particular occasions, when war, or any other misfortune, required any extraordinary public expence; and, as war was then generally but of thort duration, these taxes did not often require to be annually renewed; but now, when we must have annual taxes, such taxes ought to be imposed either upon confumption, or upon annual profits: it is therefore ridiculous to talk of stock in trade; because some employments require a great flock, and yet may yield but very little profit, and others yield a great annual profit without any stock. As experience is the best instructor, we have now no occasion to shew the mischiefs that must be brought upon a free trading country by taxes upon confumption, especially when raifed by excises, which are the only methods whereby they can be equally and effectually raised. These mischiess every think ing man in the kingdom is now fensible of; I Geo. I-but our landed gentlemen having once got their fess. I. estates assessed at such an undervalue, they would 17 14 never think of essectual methods for taxing any other fort of yearly income; because if they had, they must have consented to a new assessment, and indeed, to frequent assessments of their own estates; and, as taxes upon consumption, give ministers such an addition of power, it is not to be expected, that they will ever think of raising money for the public service by any other method.

This is the true cause of our having so long and so obstinately persisted in this method of raising the necessary annual supplies. It is true, that by this method, the people are not fo fenfible of the public expence, or of what they pay towards it, especially when every tax is mortgaged as foon as imposed; but, for this very reason every honest man ought to be against it; for the people ought always to be made fenfible of both; because they will then look more narrowly into the public accounts; they will be more cautious of involving themselves in war; they will prevent our ministers engaging in any wild and expensive schemes, or persisting in them after experience has shewn them to be impracticable; and, we believe, every one will allow, that by this method alone, it was possible for our ministers to bring the nation under such a load of debts as that we groaned under at the end of Queen Anne's reign, which we have given an account of at the end of the preceding part. The Chap. 1. An act for the better support of his majesty's houfhold, and of the bonour and dignity of the crown of Great Britain.

> By this act the same revenue, and the same funds were fettled during his majesty's life, for the support of the civil lift, as had been settled upon Queen * Anne; except the revenue of the dutchy of Cornwal, and of the first-fruits and tenths of the clergy, and of the 700 l. a week from the Post office, and the 35,000 l. a year fettled for paying the debt of the civil lift revenue made by act of parliament. And, as a testimony of their loyalty to their new fovereign, a clause was added, authorizing and requiring the Treasury forthwith to issue and pay, out of any public money, the fum of 100,000 l. to any person, who should secure the person of the Pretender, whenever he should land, or attempt to land, in any of his majesty's dominions; which clause was, by an act of the next fession improved, by inserting the words dead or

In order to encourage people to subscribe to the lottery, established by 12 Ann. sess. 2. ch. 9. (see part 2d, p. 90.) an annual addition was, by the present act, made to the fund settled by that act; the yearly sum of 116,573 l. 12 s. being granted in lieu of the yearly fund of 105,000l. with a proviso to make good the desiciency, if any, out of any public money, or, in failure thereof, out of the next aids, to be granted by parliament.

1 Geo. I. An act for enlarging the fund of the governor and company of the Bank of England, relating to Exchequer bills; and for fettling an additional revenue of 120,000 l. per annum upon his majesty during his life, for the service of the civil government; and for establishing a certain fund of 54,600 l. per annum, to raise 910,000 l. for the public service, by sale of annuities, at 6 l. per cent. per annum, redeemable by parliament, &c.

By this act a fund was named and established, which hath often fince appeared in our statute books. For which purpose the following branches of the public revenue were by this act appropriated, viz. the moiety of the first branch of the customs, and the 12th, 13th, 19th, 24th, 25th, and 31st, branches of the * customs: and to the fame fund were likewife appropriated the furplusses of the following branches, after payment of what was charged on them by former acts, viz. of the other moiety of the first branch of the customs; of the 23d branch of the customs; of the 3d, 4th, 5th, 9th, 10th, and 16th of + excise; and of the 3d and 7th of inland duties. And to all these was added the furplus of the civil list revenue, in case it fhould, with the addition by this act made to it, as under-mentioned, produce more than 700,000 l. per annum; and all other public monies, which, after Michaelmas 1715, should be brought into the Exchequer, not appropriated to any use.

^{*} See page 6, 8, 9. 4 See page 14, 15, 16.

This hodge-podge of taxes and furplusses I Geo. I. was by the act named the general, or aggregate fest. 2. fund; and, to render this fund perpetual, all 1714-the said branches not before granted in perpetuity, were by this act granted for ever, that is to say, the 1st branch of the customs as to one moiety, and the 23d and 31st branches of the customs; the 3d, 4th, 9th, and 10th branches of excise; and the 3d and 7th of inland duties.

Then, with regard to the debts charged upon this fund, a yearly fum of 120,000 l. was, by this act, added to the civil list revenue, during his majesty's life, upon condition, that if that whole revenue, with this addition, produced less than 700,000 l. the deficiency should be made good by parliament; but, if it produced more, the surplus should belong to this fund; so that the nation was, in the next reign, obliged to make good the 35,000 l. a year, part of the civil list revenue, mortgaged by 12 Ann. sess. 11. which probably will be always so, when any part of that revenue is granted away from the next successor.

It was by this act proposed to raise 910,000 l. for the public service by the sale of annuities, at the rate of 61. per cent. per ann. and that for this purpose, the yearly sum of 54,600 l. was to be set apart at the Exchequer, and paid into the Bank for answering the yearly payments to those annuitants till redeemed. And this general, or aggregate fund, was charged with the payment of 2 d. per cent. per diem on all the Exchequer bills then issued, except during the time they should be in the Exchequer, or in the hands of any receiver of the public revenue, and of 3 l. per cent. per ann. to the feff. z. 1714.

Geo. I. Bank for circulating them, as before. In the next place, it was charged with the payment of all monies that should grow due to the Bank, on account of the 45,000 l. annuity due to them by 9 Ann. ch. 7. and the 8000 l. annuity due to them by 12 Ann. fest. 1, ch. 11. In the 3d place, it was charged with the faid 120,000 l. annually for the civil lift. In the 4th, with the faid 54,600l. annuity for the new annuities by this act to be fold. In the 5th, with making good any deficiency that should happen in the Bank's original fund of 100,000 l. per ann. fecured to them by 5 W. and M. ch. 7. or in their other fund of 106,501 l. 138: 5d. per ann. secured to them by 7 Ann. ch. 7. - And, in the last place, with the yearly sum of 270,999 l. 7 s. or so much thereof, as the refidue should amount to; which residue was appropriating to the paying off and cancelling the Exchequer bills then remaining uncancelled.

It was by fect. 23, of this act, further provided, that if the faid fund should, at the end of any one year, produce more than sufficient for all these purposes, the surplus should be disposable by parliament; and, if less, the deficiency should be made good out of the next aids to be granted in parliament; and that a part of the 180,000 l. remaining due of the money that had been borrowed on the duty on hops, should be fatisfied out of the faid gro, 200 1. to be advanced by the purchase of annuities. But, what was most extraordinary, the sum of 77,694 l. 1 s. 7 d. of unappropriated money brought into the Exchequer before the 12th of June 1714, was by this act applied towards difcharging his majefty's extraordinary expences from his accession to the throne, till Michaelmas 1715; although no fuch expence had been Geo. 1 I, thought of, or any money granted for the same, fest. 2. as it ought to have been, in the committee of 1714. supply.

An act for raising 910,000 l. for public services, Chap. 19, by sale of annuities, after the rate of 5 l. per cent. per annum, redeemable by parliament, &c.

It had been found, that the said sum of 910,000 l. might be raised by the sale of redeemable annuities at the rate of 5 l. per cent. per ann. and therefore this act appropriated only 45,500 l. yearly, part of the said yearly sum of 54,600 l. towards the payment of those annuities with 250 l. yearly to the cashier, and 200 l. yearly to the accomptant, to be appointed for this purpose by the Bank, and a reward of 500 l. to the former for his extraordinary trouble, to be allowed him out of the said 910,000 l.

An act for enlarging the capital stock and yearly Chap. 21. fund of the South Sea company, and for supplying thereby 822,032 l. 4s. 8 d. to public uses; and for raising 169,000 l. for like uses, by sale of annuities, &c.

By this act the sum of 822,032 l. 4s. 8 d. was raised for the current service, by adding that sum to the then capital of the South-sea company, in order to make it compleat ten millions, and a further sum of 169,000 l. was raised for the same purpose, by sale of redeemable annuities at 5 l. per cent. per ann. for the payment of which 8450 l. per ann. other part of the said 54,600 l. per ann. was appropriated; and

1 Geo. I. and the sums allowed by the foregoing act to the fess. 2. cashier and accomptant, were by this act lessened to 100 l. reward to the former, and 100 l. a year to each.

Chap. 23. An act for making provision for the ministers of the 50 new churches, which are to be built in and about the cities of Londou and Westminster, &c.

By this act the 22d branch of the * customs was continued to Michaelmas 1725, and the furplus appropriated as a fund for providing a maintenance for the ministers of the new churches, to be issued as should be afterwards directed by parliament. The grant for this purpose was 60,000 l.

Chap. 31. An act for granting an aid to his majesty by a landtax in Great Britain, for the service of the year 1716.

By an act of the last session of Queen Anne the sum of 230,308 l. 9 s. 10 d. had been declared to be remaining due to the creditors of the public in Scotland, and for which the commissioners of Equivalent were thereby impowered to iffue debentures bearing interest at 51. per cent. from June 24, 1714, payable out of the first money due to Scotland, by way of equivalent, in pursuance of the 15th article of the Union; and, in this fession, upon report from a particular committee, an act was order'd in and pass'd, impowering the Treasury to issue 15,8221. 8 s. 7 d. 1, out of the customs, or excise in Scotland, for paying a year's interest on this fum, with the falaries and charges of the commissioners of equivalent. And, by a private act passed in this session, upon report from a partiticular committee, the sum of 18,2411. 10 s. rod. was declared to be due to William Paterson, Esq; with interest at 5 l. per cent. from March 25, 1713, and to be payable out of the equivalent due to Scotland.

[The annuities charged on this general fund called Bank annuities, were in great part subscribed into South-Sea stock, pursuant to 6

Geo. I. chap. 4. and the rest were paid off pursu-

A yearly fund being thus established, the Treasury was empowered to open books for taking in subscriptions for the purchase of annuities at 5 l. per cent. per annum, redeemable upon repayment of their principal money, and all arrears of their faid annuities; and, in these books, the proprietors of the faid debts, who were willing to accept of fuch annuities for what was due to them, were to subscribe their names, and the Treasury was to pay off those who did not subscribe, by felling to any other persons who should be willing to purchase such annuities, or by calling for fo much of the aforesaid fums from the Bank and South Sea companies, as should be wanted for that purpose, for which these two companies were each to have such an annuity as before-mentioned, in proportion to the fums called for; and the Treasury was empowered to raise money by the same methods, for paying off the following fums, viz.

And to this we must add the annuities at 51. per cent. per annum, which should become due at Michaelmas 1717, when this fund was to commence, because they were to be added to the principal; for, as to the annuities of 61. per cent. that might be due at Midsummer 1717, they were all to be paid off by the produce of these taxes that might arise before Michaelmas 1717; consequently we may reckon interest of 5 l. per cent. except the faid deficiency, and the Canada bills; for fatisfying of which, redeemable annuities at 4 per cent. were to be fold by the Treasury, which interest, as to both, was to be paid quarterly till redeemed; but this fund was besides, by a clause in this act, charged with the payment of 41, per cent. interest on the debentures to be made forth by an act of the same session for stating the debts due to the army; for which purpose money was to be imprested to the paymaster of the army, that is to fay, iffued and paid to him, and for which he was afterwards to account. And it was enacted, that upon the repayment of the principal money, with all arrears of the annuities, the fame should cease, and the fund be understood to be redeemed; but with a provifoe, that not less than 500,000 l. of the principal money should be repaid at a time; the whole of the annuities being for this purpose erected into a joint stock, and the annuities made. payable at the Bank.

This agreement was therefore, by this act established; and to secure to the Bank the regular payment of the faid annuities, allowance, and the interest both on the Exchequer bills,

And this new fund was charged with the following yearly payments, and in the order following, viz. 1st, to pay off fo much as at Midsummer 1718, shall grow due to the Bank on their faid annuity of 106,501 l. 13 s. 5 d. and so much as at Christmas 1717, shall be due for the said interest at 2 d. per cent. per dem, and so much as at the same feast-day shall be due for the allowance of 3 l. per cent. per annum, and upon the faid yearly fums of 45 000 l. and 8000 l. 2dly, To pay to much as shall, from thenceforth grow due of the faid annuities of 88,751 l. 7 s. 10 d. $\frac{1}{2}$, 100,000 l. and 76,830 l. 15 s. and the faid interest at the rate of 5 l. per cent. on so much of the faid 2,500,000 l. as shall be required to be advanced. 3dly, To pay the 120,000 l. per annum, in addition of the civil list revenue, before charged on the aggregate fund. 4thly, To pay the 54,600l. before charged on the fame. 5thly, To make good the deficiencies on the Bank's original fund of 100,000 l. per ann. charged on five feventh parts of the 4th branch of of excise. And, as an additional fecurity it was provided, that if, at the end of any quarter after Lady-day 1717, the produce of this fund should not be fufficient to answer all these purpsoes, the deficiency should be made good out of the produce in any subsequent quarter, wherein there should be an overplus; and if, at the end of any one year, to be reckoned at Michaelmas yearly, there should be a deficiency, such deficiency should be made good out of the next aids to be granted in parliament; but if there should be an overplus, fuch overplus should be at the difposition of parliament.

Sea company (being after the rate of 6 l. pet 1716. cent. per ann.) and settling on the said company a yearly fund after the rate of 5 l. per cent. per ann. redeemable by parliament, and to raise for an annuity, or annuities, at 5 l. per cent. per ann. any sum, not exceeding two millions, to be employed in lessening the national debts and incumbrances, and for making the said new yearly fund and annuities to be hercaster redeemable in the time and manner thereby prescribed.

This act recites, that in regard the rate of interest was very much lessened, the South-Sea company had agreed to accept of an annuity of 500,000 l. with 8000 l. per ann. for management as before, in lieu of 600,000 l. then due to them on their capital of 10,000,000 l. to commence from and after Midsummer 1718; and farther, that they had agreed to advance, at 5 l. per cent. interest, upon being required by the Treafury, any fum not exceeding 2,000,000 l. before Christmas 1717, on condition, that not above 500,000 l. should be required at any one time; and that they should have a fortnight's notice each time. In confideration of this, all the duties formerly appropriated to * them, were again appropriated and granted for ever; and the fund established by chap. 7. of this session, was made a collateral fecurity, for the regular payment of their faid annuity, and the interest of the money they should advance; with a provifo, that if there should be an overplus in their proper fund, it should be at the disposition of

And, it was enacted, that after compleat payment of their capital, all the duties appropriated to them should be underflood to be redeemed by parliament, and should not be iffued without the authority of parliament. Thus the government had fecured no less than 4,500,00 l. at 5 l. per cent. interest, towards paying off such of the proprietors of the redeemable debts as should not agree to accept of the same interest.

the parliament held at Westminster, the 11th day of November 1718, as appears from the following acts, is 2,726,307l. 17 s. 4 d. 4.

Chap. 1. An act for an aid by a land-tax for 1719.

This tax was 3 s. in the pound; and the loan upon it 1,4 10,000. — In this act there is a clause for charging the general, or sinking fund, with 110,312 l. 17 s. 4 d. ½, to be raised by the sale of annuities, at 5 l. per cent. till redeemed, which sum had been paid by the treasurer of the navy to the South-sea company, for making good the annuity due to them, over and above the 29,645 l. 8 s. 9 d. ¼, granted for this purpose by the preceding session, though no resolution had in this session been agreed to in the committee of supply, for making good this desiciency.

Chap. 2. An act for continuing the duties on malt, &c. for 1719.

The loan upon this act was 700,000 l.

An act for applying certain overplus monies, and Geo. 1. further sums, to be raised, as well by way of a lot-1718. tery, as by loans, towards paying off and cancel Chap 3. ling Exchequer lills, and for lessening the present great charge in relation to those bills, and for circulating and exchanging for ready money the residue of the same bills for the suture.

This act recites 3 Geo I. chap. 7, 8, 9, and enacts, that the fum of 196,444 l. 18's. and to which remained in the Exchequer at Michaelmas 1718, for the overplus-money of the aggregate fund; and all the overplus monies of the civil lift fund for three years ended at Michaelmas 1718; and 19,577 l. 10 s. which remained in the Exchequer at the same time, for the overplus money of the South-fea fund; and 190,436 l. 15 s. 11d. and 20, being the furplus for the year ended at the faid Michaelmas, upon the general or finking fund, over and above the fum of 130,000 L referved for paying the halfyear's annuities charged on the faid finking fund, to grow due at Christmas 1718; and all the overplus monies of the faid feveral funds, which should arise within the half year to end at Lady-day 1719, should be applied towards redeeming the annuity of 6,830 l. 153. granted to the Bank by 3 Geo. I. chap. 8. and for difcharging the principal and interest due to the faid Bank for circulating Exchequer bills.

For the same purpose there was likewise by this act, 500,000 l. to be raised at 4 l. per cent. interest, by way of lottery, at 3 l. a ticket; and 520,000 l. by way of loan at 5 l. per cent. interest: and as to the residue of the Exchequer bills that should remain uncancelled, the Trea-

I. chap. 7: were made payable half-yearly; and the aggregate fund was made a fecurity for paying the interest of the said 500,000 l. to be raised by way of lottery, and for paying the interest and principal of the faid 520,000 l. to be raifed by way of loan, together with 5,995 l. for the expence of drawing the lottery.

The reader may perhaps be furprized to fee a fum granted in this fession for making good the deficiency of the general or finking fund, and yet by this act a surplus of the same fund appropriated; therefore we must defire him to recollect, that by the establishment of this fund, if the duties appropriated to it did not produce yearly 724.849 l. 6 s. 10 d. the deficiency was to be made good out of the next aids to be granted by parliament, and it was for making good this deficiency, that a fum was granted in this feffion; but, as the annuities charged upon it did not amount to above 520,000 l. or thereabouts, there was a furplus over and above what was charged upon it, which, with the fum granted for making good the faid deficiency, amounted to the fum appropriated by this act. What the reason was for being so very intent upon paying off the Exchequer bills, feems to be a mystery; for furely there was no occonomy in borrowing money at 5 l. per cent. in order to pay off Exchequer bills, which then cost the thould remain of cancelled, the Tronpublic but 41. 10s. 5 d. per cent. as will ap-5 Geo. By this act, the 7th and 22d branch of the customs, which had been continued by 1 Geo. I. fest. 2. chap. 23. to Michaelmas 1725, was further continued to Lady-day 1751. And, tho' a local duty, great part of it was now feized for the use of the public, notwithstanding the city of London's petition against it, which was rejected. For, by this act, there was only 21,000l. per ann. part of the produce of this duty established as a fund for borrowing 360,000 l. at 4 l. per cent. to be applied to the uses for which the duty was at first designed; and out of the residue the yearly sum of 30,559 l. 14 s. was set a-part as a fund for securing the payment of the principal and interest at 4 l. per cent. of 505,995 for the service of the ensuing year, which was to be raifed by another lottery of 31. per ticket, the chance of which was to be determined by the drawing of the lottery just mentioned. part thereof, in case all the annuities

This act recites, that divers acts of parliament have been made and passed, whereby several public duties, revenues, and incomes have been granted, or continued in perpetuity, or for some estate, term, or interest then in being; and all, or most of the said public duties, revenues, and incomes were, and stood clogged and incumbered by authority of parliament, with sundry annuities, yearly funds, debts, or payments charged thereupon respectively, and payable out of the same, either in perpetuity, or for term or terms of life, lives, or years, in some cases absolutely, or in other cases subject to a power of redemption by parliament.

to state the public debts, which the company 6 Geo. I. were by this act to redeem or purchase, and 1719. were of two forts, redeemable, or irredeemable.

The redeemable debts were fuch as the parliament had a power to redeem, by paying off the principal and arrears of the annuity, or yearly interest due upon them, amounting in the whole to 16,546,482 l. 7 s. 1 d. 1. And these again were of two forts; that is, such as had an annuity, or yearly interest of 51. per cent. attending them till redemption, amounting in the whole to 11,779,6601. 118. 2 d3; or fuch as had an annuity of 4 l. per cent. only, attending them till redemption, amounting in the whole to 4,766,821 l. 15 s. 9 d. 1.

The irredeemable debts confifted of those annuities which had been fold for a certain term of years, without any power of redemption; and these likewise were of two forts; for they confifted of annuities that had been fold for a long term of years, that is to fay, for 99, 96, or 89 years, computed to amount in the whole to 666,821 l. 8 s. 3 d. per ann or they confifted of annuities that had been fold for a short term of years, that is to fay, for 32 years, amounting in the whole to 127,260 l. 6 s. 1 d. per ann.

These were the public debts which the company were to redeem, and their proposals established by this act, were as follow, 1st, that before the 1st of March 1721, they would take in all the redeemable debts, either by purchase, fubscriptions, or paying them off, provided they might have an addition to their then * capital of national debts as were incurred before Christ- 6 Geo. I. mas 1716, the fum of 4,156,306 l. 4 s. 11 d. 1719. 6thly, That for the liberty of purchasing the irredeemables, they would pay into the Exchequer for the same purpose 450 l. and so proportionably, for every annuity of 100 l. per ann. fo purchased by them. 7thly, That they would pay into the Exchequer for the same purpose 100 l. for every 100 l. per ann. of the long annuities, that should not be purchased and taken in by them, before the faid 1st of March 1721. And 8thly, The company undertook to circulate and exchange for feven years, and to pay the interest of 2 d. per cent. per diem that should from thenceforth grow due upon the new Exchequer bills, to be iffued by the malt act of this fession; and also to furnish a proportional part of the ready money that should be necessary for circulating any new bills that should afterwards within the faid feven years, be iffued by authority of parliament, and to pay a proportional part of the interest to grow due thereupon; the said proportional part to be, as the principal money in all the bills should be to a million; so the whole fum necessary to support the currency, or the whole interest to be paid, should be to what was to be furnished, or paid by the company; and for this purpose fix trustees were to be appointed, three whereof to be named by the Treafury, and three by the company.

This was the agreement established by this act, and it was certainly a most beneficial agreement for the public, had it been possible to carry it into execution; but the recent fate of the Mississippi in France might have shewn our parliament men, if they had not been blind or worse, that it would be impossible to carry it

6 Geo. I. into execution, without raising such a spirit of stock-jobbing, or gaming, as must necessarily end in the ruin of many thousands.

Now, as these redeemable, and irredeemable debts had several branches of the public revenue appropriated for fecuring the payment of their principal and interest, or their annuity, fuch of these branches, as had not before been granted in perpetuity, that is to fay, the 26th, 35th, and 37th branches of the * customs; the 11th, 24th, 25th, 26th, and 27th branches of + excise; and the 14th branch of inland duties. were by this act continued for ever; and the 35,000 l. per ann. out of the civil lift fund granted by virtue of 12 Ann. sess. 1. chap. 11. was by this act to have continuance for ever. it was enacted, that the faid several duties, now granted for ever, and also all the duties before granted for ever, which had been charged in whole, or in part, with the payment of these annuities, or redeemable debts, should be in whole or in part brought into the Exchequer, as also all the duties formerly appropriated to the South-sea company, and an account kept of fo much of the produce as ought to be applied towards payment of the company's then prefent annuity, and the additions to be made thereto; or of their yearly allowance for charges of management, and the additions to be made to the same, in order to be paid weekly to the faid company accordingly; and, as to the residue of the faid produce, it was to be applied to the payment of fuch annuities, or debts, as fhould not be taken into the faid company's capital flock, which were to continue to be paid, at the same offices, and out of the same duties, 6 Geo: I. and at the same times, as formerly. Thus this 1719. famous and fatal scheme was established, and the fuccess of it will appear from what follows in this history.

An act for making forth new Exchequer bills, not Chap. to. exceeding one million, at a certain interest; and for lending the same to the South-sea company at an higher interest, upon security of repaying the same, and such high interest into the Exchequer. for uses to which the fund for lessening the public debts, called the finking fund is applicable; and for circulating and exchanging upon demand the faid bills at or near the Exchequer.

This act may be reckoned a part of the preceding scheme; for, as it was necessary for the company to have a large fum of ready money at command, the Treasury were impowered to iffue a million in Exchequer bills, besides those issued by the malt-act of this session, which bills were to carry an interest of 2 d. per cent. per diem, and to be lent to the company, for which they were, by this act, to pay the public 51. per cent. per annum (though the Treasury afterwards agreed to pay 4 l. per cent. interest) until repayment on or before March 1, 1721. And the finking fund, together with the fum of 328,6731. 4s. 10 d. 1, advanced by the company upon 5 Ann. chap. 19. which was remaining in the Exchequer, were made a fund for the public's borrowing at 51. per cent. its proportional part of the money necessary for circulating these Affurance companies were elablished, each of 6 Geo. I. An act for laying a duty upon wrought plate; and Chap. 11. for applying money arising for the clear produce by sale of the forfeited estates, towards answering his majesty's supply, &c.

By this act a new tax was invented and posed, viz. a tax of 6 d. per ounce troy, upon all filver plate that should be imported into, or made in this kingdom; and, because we had not before a fufficient number of lucrative places at the disposal of the crown, his majesty was impowered to appoint a new fet of commissioners, who were to appoint officers under them, for levying and managing this duty, with fuch falaries as the Treasury should think fit to allow, and for due levying of the fame, they were armed with all the powers of excise. This therefore may be called the 28th branch of excise, and was granted for ever after June 1, 1720; on which his majesty was enabled to borrow 312,000 l. at 4 l. per cent. with the finking fund as a collateral fecurity, to be applied to the fupply of the ensuing year; and, for the same purpose, the sum of 200,737 l. 14 s. 9 d. 1, was by this act to be taken out of the clear produce of the forfeitures for treason.

Chap. 18. An act for the better securing certain powers and privileges intended to be granted by his majesty, by two charters for assurance of ships and merchandizes at sea, and for lending money upon bottomry, &c.

By this act the Royal Exchange and London Assurance companies were established, each of which was to pay, in consideration of their charter, 300,000 l. for the use of his majesty, to 6 Geo. I. discharge the debts and expences of his civil 1719. government; though no account of these debts had been laid before the House, nor any resolution of the committee of supply for paying them off: nay, when a motion was made, May 6, for an account of those debts, the same was rejected, and an address agreed to, for acknowledging his majefty's goodness in applying the advantages arising from the establishment of these companies, to the use of his civil government, without burthening his people with any new aid or fupply; which feems fomething very extraordinary, as the House had no parliamentary knowledge of the existence of any such debts. This fum of 600,000 l. cannot therefore be reckoned among the grants or provisions made by this fession, 7 Geo. I. The whole amount of the money granted by the parliament held at Westminster the 8th day of December 1720, as appears from the following acts, is 2,801,028 l. 16 s. 6 d. ½.

Chap. 1. An act for restraining the sub-governor; deputy-governor, directors, treasurer, or cashier, deputy cashier and accomptant of the South-Sea company, from going out of this kingdom for the space of one year, and until the end of the then next session of parliament; and for discovering their estates and effects, and for preventing the transporting or alienating the same.

Such a rage of stock-jobbing did this Southfea scheme raise in the people of this kingdom, that, by the beginning of June, South-sea stock fold for near 900 per cent. but his majesty having about that time declared his intention of going abroad, many of those who were to attend him began to fell out, which reduced the price to 640; and from that to 750, it continued till the shutting of the company's books. June 22; after which time, as no flock could be transferred, or paid for till the opening, and confequently ready money was not necessary for making bargains, there appeared fuch a number of buyers, that the price rose to 1000 l. per cent. for the opening. This of course produced a greater number of fellers than of buyers at the opening, which gave a turn to the frenzy, and from that time the price continued finking. notwithstanding all the arts that could be practifed either by the directors or the ministers, and was but about 200 l. per cent. when this fession 7 Geo, I, was opened, Dec. 8, 1720.

There was therefore a general ferment both within doors and without, when this fession opened; and the losers were clamorous for the most severe punishments upon the guilty, without confidering that they themselves were almost as guilty as the contrivers; for, if they had not affifted by fubscribing, or purchasing at a much higher price than the flock could be worth, with no other view than that of taking advantage of the prevailing madness, it would have been impossible for the contrivers to have blown up the bubble, and no man, in either house of parliament, who consented to the law that fet the scheme on foot, could say that he was intirely innocent; the public was the only person, if we may be allowed the expression, who was intirely innocent; and therefore the principal care of the porliament should now have been, that the public should not be a sufferer by any redress that was to be given, or any new regulation that was to be made. Whether this rule was observed, we shall see in the sequel; for, as it was necessary to punish some of the principal actors in this scene of authenticated villainy; and, as some new regulations were neceffary for reftoring public credit, both houses entered upon the affair in a very few days after their first meeting, the result whereof was the foregoing and the three following acts.

Chap. 5. An act to enable the South-sea company to ingraft part of their capital stock and fund, into the Bank, and another part thereof into the East-India company; and for giving further time for payments to be made by the said company to the public.

This act gave a power to the South-fea company to assign and transfer to the Bank such share of that part of their capital, which carried an interest of 5 l. per cent. together with the fund attending the fame, as should be agreed on between the two companies, not exceeding in the whole nine millions capital flock; and a like power of affigning and transferring to the East-India company. The stock thus to be transferred was to be subject to the same reducement and redemption of interest or annuity, as it then was by law, but to be free from payment of any part of what the Southfea company had agreed to pay by chap. 4. of the former session, and from the charge of circulating Exchequer bills, which that company had undertaken by ch. 10. of the same session, as also from all debts, &c. then incurred by the said company; and the Bank and East-India company were to have each a proportional share of allowance for charges of management. But, as the

the proprietors of the annuities and public 7 Geo. 1. debts, which had been subscribed into the South-1720 fea company, contended, that they were not bound by such their subscriptions, and were actually preparing to have the question decided by law; therefore it was provided, that if these proprietors should, by due course of law, be released from their subscriptions, any bargain, or assignment made by the said company, in pursuance of this act, should be void.

other purposes in the said act expressed.

By this act, the estates of all the persons mentioned in the title were vested in trustees to be sold, and the produce thereof, over and above what was by the act allowed to each, was appropriated to the South sea company, for increasing their capital stock, and that of all the members thereof, in proportion to their respective shares therein.

These were the first regulations that were made; but, before this session ended, it was thought necessary to determine the dispute between the company and the subscribing proprietors of the annuities and public debts, by act of parliament; and therefore an act passed. entitled. An act for making several provisions to restore the public credit, which suffers by the frauds and mismanagements of the late directors of the South-sea company and others.

By this act it was enacted, 1st, That the company should be free from what they had engaged to pay the public for liberty of increasing their capital by the purchase of the public debts; and, in lieu thereof, two millions only of their capital stock should be sunk and annihilated from Midfummer 1722, together with the annuity attending the same. 2dly, That the company should allow certain quantities of their stock, as therein mentioned, to the proprietors of the faid annuities and public debts subscribed. and the proprietors of the money subscriptions upon the money then advanced by them; and that the former should accept of the same in full of all claims; and that the latter should be free from all farther payments, notwithstanding any doubt or question concerning the validity of their subscriptions. 3dly, That the increased capital flock, by means of this whole transaction, gained by the campany, should be divided among all the proprietors of the whole capita flock, in proportion to their feveral interest therein. And 4thly, That fuch persons (brokers excepted) as had, fince the 25th of March 1720. borrowed money of the company upon the pledge of stock, or subscription receipts, should be free from any future demand upon that account, provided they paid to the company 10 l. per cent. of the money borrowed, before Midfurnmer 1722, and the pledges to belong to the company. Thus

Thus the affairs relating to the company were 7 Geo. I. fettled, and it might have been expected, that 1720. after this, all contracts for stock at the high prices would have been declared void, which was absolutely necessary for restoring credit between man and man, and it would have been but just in the legislature to have done fo, as they had, by these regulations, rendered the stock not worth half the intrinsic value it was when those contracts were made; but, perhaps fome of the leading men in our legislature were fellers in many of those contracts, and therefore, all that was done in regard to them, was only to declare, that fuch of them as should be unperformed in whole or in part, and not compounded before September 29, 1721, should be void, if not registered before November 1, 1721. or, if the feller was not possessed of the stock at the time the contract was made, or within fix days after; and farther, that no special bail should be required upon any action brought on any fuch contract. This, instead of being a relief to any buyer, not already a notorious bankrupt, was a forcing him to depart from any objection he might have in law against the contract he had made, and to compound, as foon as possible, in order to preserve his credit, by preventing the registring of the contract. We may therefore easily judge whether the contrivers of this sham relief, were buyers or sellers in such contracts.

- Chap. 20. An att for continuing the duties on malt, &c. to raise money by way of a lottery, &c.

By this act the usual malt-tax was continued for another year, and such a precarious situation had our public credit been reduced to by the South-sea scheme, that, in order to borrow upon this sund, as we have for many years done upon all others as soon as granted, a 10 l. lottery was established; and, if the tax did not amount to 735,000 l. for paying the adventurers in this lottery, which was 35,000 l. more than advanced by them, the same was to be made good out of the next aids granted in parliament after September 29, 1722, and the tickets, both blanks and prizes, were to carry an interest of 41. per cent. from June 24, 1722, 'till paid off.

There was likewise a clause in this act for enabling the York Buildings company to dispose of rent charges, or annuities by way of lottery, to the full value of such forfeited estates as they had purchased, or should purchase; and this without any limitation of time, or as to the fort or number of lotteries they were to set on foot,

An all for raifing a fum not exceeding 500,000 1, 1720. by charging unnuities at the rate of 51. per cent. per annum, upon the civil lift revenues till redeemed by the crown; and for enabling bis majesty, bis beirs or successors, (by causing such a deduction to be made as therein mentioned) to make good to the civillist, the payments which shall have been made upon the faid annuities; and for borrowing money upon certain lottery tickets; and for discharging the corporation for assurances of part of the money which they were obliged to pay to his majesty; and for making good a deficiency to the East-India company.

By this act his majesty was enabled to borrow 500,000l. at 5 l. per cent. interest, from September 11, 1721, until redeemed; and his majefty, his heirs and fucceffors, were impowered to cause a deduction to be made of 6 d. in the pound, out of all monies, which, after August 1, 1721, should be paid upon all pensions and annuities, charged on the hereditary, or temporary duties, and upon all falaries, fees, and wages, payable in respect of offices of profits. granted by, or, or derived from the crown, and upon all other payments from the crown whatfoever, or upon any arrears thereof, the pay of the army and navy excepted; which deductions were appropriated to the payment of the faid interest; and the debts then due upon the civil lift were, upon getting tallies, to be taken as ready money for the purchase of those annuities, which were made payable at the Bank; but; what was most extraordinary, the Bank, tho'

7 Geo. I. all the other funds should be redeemed, was 1720. to continue a corporation, till these annuities should be redeemed by the crown.

As money was thus provided for paying off the debts of the civil lift, there was a clause in this act, from which it appears, that the two Affurance Companies had, by this time paid, or fecured to be paid, 300,000 l. part of the 600,000 l. which they had engaged to pay by chap. 18. of the former fession, so that 300,000 l. still remained to be paid; but this they were, by this act, released and discharged from, after payment of all the several sums of 38,750 l. each, which they had secured to be paid; from whence we must compute, that his majesty had, in the whole 800,000 l. for paying off the debts contracted upon the civil list in the first six or feven years of his reign.

And, by another clause in this act, a deficiency of 191,0281. 16 s. 6 d. 2, due to the East-India company at Michaelmas 1719, was ordered to be paid to them out of the Sinking Fund, and a small overplus of the duties on salt then remaining in the Exchequer; though no resolution for this purpose had been agreed

Chap. 20. An act for paying off and cancelling one million of Exchequer bills, and to give ease to the South-sea company, in respect of its present obligation to circulate or contribute towards circulating Exchequer bills; and to give further time to that company for repayment of one million which was lent to them; and for issuing a further sum in new Exchequer bills, and that the Exchequer bills which are to continue, may be circulated at easy and moderate rates, &c.

By this act, the Exchequer bills then current were computed to amount to 1,919,912 l. 10 s. viz. a million lent to the South sea company, 896,662 l. 10 s. issued in lieu of old bills, by the malt-act of 6 Geo. I. and 23,250 l. iffued by the faid act for the interest on the old bills then cancelled. Of these current bills a million was by this act to be paid off and cancelled at Lady-day 1722, by the money then arisen, or afterwards to arise out of the Sinking Fund; and, in lieu of them, the Treasury were impowered to iffue, after the faid day, a like fum in new Exchequer bills, at 2 d. per cent. per diem; to be placed as fo much cash in the hands of the tellers of the Exchequer for the fervice of the ensuing year; because the Southfea company found themselves unable, and were afterwards, by this act, indulged with time, until June 7, 1723, to repay the million lent to them by 6 Geo. I. ch. 10. (see p. 59.) And,

And, as they were to pay 5 l. per cent. interest 8 Geo. I. for the same, they were, by this act, acquitted 1721. of the obligation they lay under by the faid act of 6 Geo. I. chap. 2. as to the circulation of Exchequer bills; and the Treasury were impowered to enter into a contract for circulating the same, with any persons who would agree to do so at a rate not exceeding 3 l. per cent. per ann. as well for paying the interest at their own costs, as in reward for their service, upon all fuch bills, fo long as they should exceed one million in principal, and 20 s. per cent. per ann. after their being reduced to a million or under. And, for fecuring fuch persons, the Sinking Fund, as well as the debt due by the South-sea company, was charged with the payment of the principal and interest, or allowance for circulation, of all fuch bills.

Moreover, by a clause in this act, it was declared, that the civil list revenues did produce, in clear money for one year, ended at Michaelmas 1720, 102,682 l. 7 s. 11 d. ‡, above the sum of 700,000 l. And, as this overplus money belonged, and was to be replaced to the Sinking Fund, out of the 500,000 l. which his majesty was impowered to borrow by chap. 27. of last session; therefore, by proper clauses in this act, the method was prescribed, and the Treasury impowered to do so.

By this act likewise, a new tax was imposed, which we may call the 38th branch of the customs (see page 12 of this part,) and which was an additional duty of 2 s. per bushel, and proportionally over and above all former customs and duties, upon all apples imported after Ladyday 1722, during three years, or before the end of the session of parliament next following the raising the supplies granted in this session; but there was no power granted by this act, for borrowing money upon, or mortgaging this new imposition.

Also, by some other clauses in this act, the duties then payable on pictures imported, were after Lady-day 1722 abolished, and, in lieu thereof, new duties imposed, according to their dimensions, viz. 3 l. per picture of sour square feet or upwards; 40 s. per picture of two feet square, and under sour, and 20 s. for every picture under that size. Those duties were appropriated to the same uses with the old, and to continue for the same time, that is to say, for ever.

The whole amount of the money granted by 9 Geo. I. the parliament begun and holden at Westmin-1722. ster the 9th day of October 1722, as appears from the following acts, is 1,850,000 l.

An act for granting an aid by a land-tax for the Chap. 2. year 1723.

By this act the sum of 18,243 l. 1 s. 2 d. ½, of former land-taxes then in the Exchequer, was appropriated to the supply, and a land-tax of 2 s. in the pound was continued for another year; on which a million was to be raised, either by loans, or by Exchequer bills, at 3 l. per cent.

An act for continuing the the duties on malt, &c. Chap. 3.

By this act the fum of 750,000l. was to be raifed by a 10 l. lottery.

An all for redeeming certain annuities, now payable Chap. 5. by the cashier of the Bank of England, at the rate of 5 l. per cent. per ann.

In order to understand this act, which was founded upon the resolution of a committee of the whole House upon the state of public credit, agreed to December 18, we must observe, that the 5 l. per cent. annuities, which had been established by 3 Geo. I. ch. 7. (see page 35.) the capital sum of 1,204,786 l. 3 s. 4 d. ½, remained unsubscribed into the South-sea company, and that notice had been given for paying off the same; therefore by this act, 204,786 l. 3 s. 4d. ½, part of the said sum was to be paid off

9 Geo. I. by the produce of the Sinking Fund, and one million of Exchequer bills to be iffued at 2 d. per cent. per diem, which bills were to be gradually paid off, and cancelled by the future produce of the same fund. We must likewise observe, that of the 51. per cent. annuities establish'd I Geo. I. sess. 21. see page 31.) the capital sum of 235,297 l. 18 s. 4 d. remained unsubscribed into the South-sea company; therefore by this act, and the resolution of the said committee, notice was given, that the said sum would be paid off at Lady-day 1724.

Chap. 6. An act for reviving and adding two millions to the capital stock of the South sea company, and for reviving a proportional part of the yearly sund payable at the Exchequer, and for dividing their whole capital (after such division made) into two equal parts or moieties, and for converting one of the said moieties into certain annuities for the benefit of the members, and for settling the remaining moiety in the said company, &c.

By this act, which had the fame foundation with the preceding, the two millions capital flock of the South sea company, which had been sunk by virtue of 7 Geo. I. self. 2. ch. 1, (see p. 66.) was restored to them, together with the annuity attending the same. Thus every shilling advantage, which the public was to have reaped by this famous transaction was annihilated; and the proprietors, meaning the old proprietors, every one of whom ought to have been punished for consenting to the fraudulent management of their directors, were highly rewarded; for, by having the surplus stock divided among all the proprietors, both old and new, in pursuance of the said act of 7 Geo. I. 9 Geo. I. fest. 2. chap. 1. the old proprietors got near, 1722. if not above 50 l. per cent. added to their former capital; whereas, if justice had been done upon either of them, or to the public, the old proprietors ought to have been made to pay the whole of what the company engaged to pay to the public for leave to increase their capital, which might have been eafily done by calling for the company's books, as they stood when that contract was approved of by the general court. This would for the future have made the proprietors of all public companies a little cautious of impowering their directors to fet on foot any schemes for defrauding the public; but, by our thus allowing them to divide the spoil among them, without obliging them to pay one shilling of that which they had agreed to pay, we may be faid to have fold them a legal licence to cheat mankind; and, after they had cheated as much as they could, we then released what they had promised to pay for it, which was a precedent of a most dangerous tendency.

By the same act the capital of this company, which then amounted to 33,802,483 l. 14 s. 2d. was divided into two parts, one moiety of which to remain as the South-sea company's capital, and to have the advantage as well as risk of their trade, together with their allowances for expence of management, being 9,397 l. 9 s. 6 d. per ann. and the other moiety was converted into annuities at 5 l. per cent. till Midsummer 1727, and 4 l. per cent. afterwards; the first moiety to be called the South-sea company's trading stock, and the other was to be called South-sea annuities; and, as the whole

6 s. 11 d. ½ per ann. the annuitants were to have their annuities paid out of the same, and the residue to belong to the trading stock. If the produce of the duties should be deficient, the two moieties were to bear equal share of that deficiency, until it should be provided for by parliament; but the whole was again declared redeemable after Midsummer 1727, by payment of not less than 500,000 l. at a time, to be applied to the paying off so much of the annuity, or trading stock, as the parliament should then direct.

Chap. 18. An act for granting an aid to his majesty by laying a tax upon Papists, and for making such other persons, as, upon due summons, shall refuse, or neglect to take the oaths therein mentioned, to contribute towards the said tax; for reimbursing to the public part of the great expences occasioned by the late conspiracies; and for discharging the estates of Papists from the two third parts of the rents and profits thereof for one year, and all arrears of the same, and from such forseitures as are therein more particularly described.

By this act the real and personal estates of Papists and Nonjurors were charg'd with 100,000l, to be raised out of the same in 1723, over and above their double land-tax; and, for this purpose, the sum to be raised upon such estates was, by this act, particularly and distinctly assessed upon each county, and upon many of our cities; but the sum total of all these assessments amounted to no more than 95,989 l. 19 s. 9 d. so that we do not see how it could produce 100,000 l. 9 Geo. f. and yet upon this fund, the Treasury were impowered to borrow by loans, or Exchequer bills 100,000 l. at 3 l. per cent. although by the act there was above 6 d. in the pound to be allowed for collecting the same.

An all to continue the coinage duties, &c.

By this act, the 7th branch of the customs (see page 4.) was continued for seven years longer, and to the end of the then next session; with an allowance to the Treasury as before, to make it good 15,000 l. a year. And, by the same act, the duties payable ad valorem on books, were abolished, and a duty of 14 s. per bundred weight imposed upon all bound books imported, after June 24, 1723.

of 51. per cent. per ann. and for payment of the principal and interest on the standing orders for the blank tickets in the lottery granted for the service of the year 1714; and for making good the loss which happened in the treasure of his majsty's Exchequer, by the reduction of guineas; and for granting relief to Catherine Collingwood, widow.

By this act, the produce of the Sinking Fund, on or before Lady-day 1724, (except what had before been appropriated) was applied towards paying off the principal and interest of such of the annnities, established by I Geo. I. sess. 2. ch. 19, 21*, and fuch of the standing orders for the blank lottery tickets, established by 12 Ann. + feff. 2. chap. q. as had not been fubscribed into the capital stock of the South-sea company; for which purpose the said produce, together with the monies applicable to the payment of the faid standing orders, were to be iffued by way of imprest, to the cashier of the Bank, and to the pay-master of the faid orders. There was besides, in this act, a clause without any authority from the committee of supply, for allowing to the tellers of the Exchequer, 15,144 l. 19 s. to make good the loss by the reduction of guineas, from 21s. 6d. to 21s. with respect to the guineas then in their office: and another clause for paying 6,000 l. to Mrs. Collingwood.

10Geo. I. An act for repealing certain duties therein mention-1723. ed, payable upon coffee, tea, cocoa nuts, chocolate, Chap. 10. and cocoa paste imported; and for granting certain inland duties in lieu thereof, &c.

> By this act, a considerable alteration was made as to the duties payable upon the importation of coffee, tea, cocoa nuts, chocolate, and cocoa paste; for the duties payable upon coffee and tea, by 6 and 7 W. III. chap. 7. by 3 Ann. ch. 4. and by 10 Ann. chap. 26. and the duties payable upon cocoa nuts, by the faid acts of 6 and 7 W. III. ch. 7. and 3 Ann. ch. 4. were, from June 24, 1724, abolished, and, in lieu of these, the inland duties, or excises following, were imposed, viz. on all coffee to be sold, 2s. per pound; on all tea to be fold, 4 s. per pound, and on all chocolate to be made or fold, 1 s. 6 d. per pound, over and above all customs and duties payable by other acts, upon the importation thereof; and chocolate ready made, or cocoa paste, were from that day prohibited to be imported. The reasons affigned for these alterations were, that the duties then subsisting upon coffee, tea, cocoa nuts, chocolate, and cocoa paste, were, or might be, very much lessened, not only by the clandestine importation thereof from parts beyond the feas, but also by fraudulent relanding of the same, after they have been exported from this kingdom for foreign parts, and the duties thereupon drawn back, without paying any duties for the same, to the detriment of the revenue, and the ruin of the faid traders in the faid commodities.

By this act, a land-tax of 2 s. in the pound was imposed for 1725; and the sum of 13 010l. 7s. 2d. remaining in the Exchequer for arrears of several land-taxes payable in 1721, or before, was applied as part of the supply for 1725.

By this act, a new book of rates was established, which was made part of the act, and printed therewith; fo that from this time there were very few forts of goods, but what had a certain rate fixed upon them, by which they were to pay the duties upon importation; but, if not rated in either of the books of rates, nor by any former act, they were, as before, to pay the duties, according to the value sworn to by the importer, and under the same condition, if undervalued, as before *. Several new rules and orders for regulating the payment of the duties were added: the additional duty upon apples granted by 8 Geo. An act for continuing the duties on malt, &c. in Chap. 8. England, and for granting certain duties upon malt, &c. in Scotland, &c.

By this act the usual malt-tax was continued for another year in England; and was now, for the first time, extended to Scotland; but, as the malt in Scotland was not deemed fo good as that in England, it was to pay but 3 d. per bushel, unless imported into England; in which case the duty was to be made good at the rate of 6 d. per bushel; and the duty upon mum, cyder, and perry, was made the same as in England. There was, however, a provisoe, that in case the said duty in Scotland did not produce 20,000 l. the commissioners of excise should make fuch a furcharge upon all those who had made any malt in Scotland, as would make the produce amount to that fum. By this act likewise the duty upon news-papers was increased, by making it a half-penny for every half sheet of which they consisted.

By this act the annuities mentioned in the title of it were, with the consent of the Bank, to be reduced, as therein mentioned after Mid-summer 1727; and redeemable upon payment of 1,775,027 l. 17 s. 10 d. ½, and 2,000,000 l. being the principal sums for which they were first granted, or proportionally upon payment of any part, not being less than 500,000 l. at a time.

Chap. 17. An act for redeeming the annuities of 25,000 l. per annum, charged on the civil list revenues, by an act of the 7th year of his majesty's reign; and for discharging the debts and arrears due from his majesty to his servants, tradesmen, and others.

By this act, which was brought in, and passed in consequence of a message from his majesty, delivered April 8, his majesty was impowered to raise 1,000,000 l. either by issuing Exchequer bills at 2 d. per cent. per diem, or by any other method at 3 l. per cent. per ann. one moiety of which was to be applied towards repaying the money borrowed, and redeeming the annuities established by 7 Geo. I. self. 1. chap. 27. and the other moiety towards satisfying the debts and arrears, and other uses of his majesty's civil government; and, as a security fecurity for the repayment of this money, with 11 Geo. Ithe interest to grow due thereupon, his majesty 1724, was to continue, during his life, the deduction of 6 d. per pound out of the payments by the said act made liable thereto; and, after his demise, the said sum, or so much thereof, as should remain unpaid, with all the interest due,

was to remain a charge upon the hereditary revenue.

This session became famous for the punishment of one noble lord, and the pardon of another, to wit, the Earl of Macclessield, who was impeached by the Commons, and punished by judgment of the Lords, for misdemeanors in his office of lord high chancellor; and Henry St. John, late Lord Viscount Bolingbroke, who having obtained his majesty's pardon, got an act passed this session for enabling him to take and enjoy lands, &c. notwithstanding his attainder.

By this act, a land-tax of 2s. in the pound was continued for another year; and the money was to be raised by borrowing at 3l. per cent. or by issuing a million of Exchequer bills, at 2 d. per cent. per diem.

Chap. 2. An act for granting to his majesty the sum of one million to be raised by way of lottery.

By this act his majesty, his heirs and succesfors were enabled to continue the deductions of 6 d. per pound, upon all pensions and annuities charged upon the civil lift, and upon all falaries, fees, and wages, payable in respect of any offices of profit, except as before in 7 Geo. I. fest 1. * ch. 27. out of which 30,000 l. per ann. was established as a fund for raising 1,000,000 l. at 3 l. per cent. by way of a lottery, at 10 l. a ticket, which money was to be applied towards discharging and cancelling the 990,000 l. value of Exchequer bills then remaining uncancelled, of those that had been issued by 8 Geo. I. + ch. 20. for the use of the civil lift. And, by this act, malt made for exportation was to pay no duty, nor to have any drawback.

By this act, which was called the pot-act, such a duty as the commissioners to be appointed by his majesty should direct, not under 11. nor above 6 l. per ann. was imposed upon every victualler and retailer of beer and ale in the cities of London and Westminster, and within the bills of mortality; for which purpose every such retailer was to take out a permission or licence from the commissioners yearly, and compound with them for the duty to be paid, under the penalty of 20 l. And all fuch retailers were prohibited to fend any beer or ale out of their house, in any pot, cup, or other drinking veffel, belonging to themselves, that should contain less than one gallon, under the penalty of 40 s. which prohibition was defigned as a favour; because they lost many of their pots by fending them out; but it was foon found to be impracticable, and therefore never carried into execution. Likewise, by clauses in this act, the commisfioners were impowered to licence 100 more hackney chairs, at 10 s. each per ann. which was appropriated to the same use with the former tax on hackney coaches and chairs. By this act a great many new stamp duties were imposed upon law proceedings of almost all kinds, in order to make good the lofs which had been fustained by many of the suitors in Chancery, by the infolvency of fome of the mafters; which was to commence from August 2, 1726, and to continue for fixteen years; and and is to be reckoned the 18th branch of our inland duties*. Upon this fund the faid court was enabled to borrow 60,000 l. at 5 l. per cent. for answering, we presume, such suitors as had occasion for their money; for furely, the court was not to borrow money at interest, in order to lodge it in the Bank, without any interest. Whether the fine imposed upon the Earl of Macclesfield was applied towards making good the faid loss, does not appear by the act.

Upon a report from the committee of the whole House, March 7, it was resolved, that in four years, from Midsummer 1719, to Midsummer 1723, no more than 1,500 l. had been paid into the Exchequer on account of the duties on hawkers and pedlars; and that, by this neglect, there was a deficiency of 36,693 l. 13 s. 5 d. And yet, though it thus appeared to the House, that the officers of the Exchequer had been negligent of their duty, not so much as a motion was made for enquiring into the conduct of any of them. Nay, the commissioners 13Geo. I. of hawkers and pedlars themselves were suf-1726. fered to escape all manner of parliamentary punishment.

In the account laid before this session, how the money granted for last year had been disposed of, there was one article thus: Item, for securing the trade of this kingdom, and pre-ferving the peace of Europe, 125,000 l.

And, tho any farther explanation of this gross article was, February 21, absolutely refused to the House; yet, upon the question, it was carried by a great majority, that no such explanation should be insisted on; which is a precedent that may make future ministers very indifferent how they squander the public money.

Geo. Between these two methods of granting, the reader must see a very remarkable difference, with regard to the fecurity of our constitution. By the first method the tax ceases of itself, as soon as the money borrowed upon it is paid off, and the people would no longer be bound by law to pay But, by the fecond method, the people remain bound by law to pay the tax, even after the money borrowed upon it has been fatisfied: may, they must remain so bound until the crown has confented to an act for repealing that by which the tax was granted: --- And furely, a tyrannical fovereign might more eafily prevail with the officers of his Exchequer to iffue the money in their hands without authority of parliament, than he could prevail with the people to pay any tax whatfoever without the authority of parlia-A full payment of all the national debt, which, indeed, is an event not much to be dreaded, would now therefore be one of the most dangerous things that could happen to our constitution, because the king would then have a revenue of above four millions coming yearly into his Exchequer, without any new grant from parliament; and, after its being once there, it would be very easy for him to make himself master of it, which revenue would effectually enable him to render his proclamations of equal force with an act of parliament, especially if our parliaparliaments, by a continued course of corruption 1 Geo. Now, as all the taxes subsisting at the end of Queen Anne's reign, were subsisting at the end of the last reign, and had all, except as beforementioned, been made perpetual according to the new method, we need only refer the reader to the lift of them in the beginning of part 3d of this history, and observe, that a 38th * branch had been added to the customs by 8 Geo. I. chap. 20. a 28th + branch to the excise, by 6 Geo. I. ch. 11. and the 17th and an 18th I branch to our inland duties, by 12 Geo. I. chap. 12, 23. The tax upon pensions, &c. granted by 7 Geo. I. fess. 1. ch. 27. may likewise be added to the number of inland duties; because all those penfions are paid by the people, and might be diminished, if the possessors can spare to pay this tax upon them: and the alteration in the duties upon coffee, tea, and chocolate, made by 10 Geo. I. chap. 10. may properly enough be called the addition of a 29th branch to the excise. Thus we had fublifting, at the beginning of this reign 38 branches of || customs, 29 branches of

An act for continuing the duties on malt, &c. for Chap. 1; the year 1729.

The loan upon this act was 750,000 l. at 3 l. per cent.

An act for granting an aid by a land-tax for the Chap. 4: year 1729.

This tax was 3 s. in the pound: and the sum borrowed upon it 1,500,000 l. at 3 l. per cent.

of annuities to the Bank of England, after the Chap. 3. rate of 4 l. per cent. per ann. redeemable by parliament; and for applying the produce of the finking fund:

On Feb. 3. a motion was made, that the House would raise the supplies necessary for the current fervice of the year, without creating any new debt upon any fund whatfoever; but the question was carried in the negative, and this bill afterwards brought in and passed, by which an annuity of 50,000 l. was established, and charged upon the furplus of the 37th branch of the * customs; the 24th, 25th, 26th, and 27th branches of + excise; and the 14th branch of t inland duties; with proper clauses for making good the deficiency, and disposing of the excess, if any should appear; upon which annuity the Bank engaged to advance 1,250,000 l. to be repaid at not less than 500,000 l. at a time. And, by the same act, a further direction was given for issuing the produce of the sinking fund, by paying 500,000 l to the Bank, for redeeming a proportional part of their annuity 80,000 l. established by 11 Geo. I. chap. 9. As the duties thus mortgaged to the Bank were first granted for paying off in 32 years, the principal as well as interest of the debts charged upon them, the furplus arifing by the South-fea company's paying off that debt, and getting a right to those duties, properly belonged to the finking fund; and therefore the re-mortgaging of that furplus was really, though not literally, an incroachment upon that facred fund.

An act for making good the loss occasioned by a sum 2 Geo.II. of money being stolen out of his majesty's Exche-Chap. 6. quer, in the year 1724.

By this act, the Treasury were impowered to pay to Lord William Powlet, out of the monies of the finking fund, 4,191 l. 14 s. 6 d. to replace so much stolen out of his office as Teller of the Exchequer. This act was passed in pursuance of a petition from him, without being warranted by any resolution of the committee of supply.

An act for laying a duty upon compound waters, or Chap. 17. Spirits, and for licensing the retailers thereof.

By this act, a duty of 5 s. per gallon was laid upon all compound spirits in hand at Christmas 1729, or afterwards to be imported, or homemade, over and above all former duties; and an annual tax of 20 pound upon every retailer, in any quantity less than a gallon, to commence July 1, 1729; for which purpose every such retailer was, before that day, to take out a licence, and to renew it annually. But this act was designed rather as a prohibition of the retail of such liquors in small quantities, than as a provision for raising money; and was to continue in force for sive years only.

This tax was 2 s. in the pound, and the fum borrowed upon it was 1,000,000 l. at 3 l. per cent. per ann.

An act for continuing the duties on malt, &c. Chap. 7.

The loan upon this act was 750,000 l. at 3 l. per cent.

An act for reducing the annuity, or fund of the Chap. 14. United East-India company, and for ascertaining their right to trade to the East-Indies, and the continuance of their corporation for that purpose, upon the terms therein mentioned.

By this act an agreement was established with the East-India company, by which that company was, on or before December 24, 1730, to advance, or rather to make a free-gift to the government of 200,000 l. to be applied to the current service; and moreover they agreed, that from and after Michaelmas 1730, their annuity of 160,000 l. should be reduced to 128,000 l. in respect of their capital of 3,200,000 l. being at the rate of four instead of 5 per cent. interest; that, upon a year's notice after Lady-Day 1736, their said capital might be paid off by partial payments of not less than 500,000 l. at a time,

3 Geo.II. and their faid annuity of 128,000 l. to cease in proportion; and their exclusive privilege of trading to the East-Indies, should cease upon three years notice to be given to them after Lady-day 1766, and upon repayment of their faid capital, and all arears of their faid annuity. How the company were induced to make all these concessions, does not appear by the act: for they feem to have been as generous to the government at the time this act was passed, as the government had been to them in the year. 1712, when, without any confideration, their exclusive trade was, by the act 10 Ann. 'ch. 28. continued to them for ever, and their annuity of 160,000 l. made irredeemable before Lady-day 1736. They took care, however, by this act, to have their corporation again established for ever; and that they might, lafter the ceasing of their exclusive privilege, continue to trade to the East Indies as a corporation, in common with other his majesty's subjects trading to those parts.

Chap. 16. An act for raising 550,000l. by Exchequer bills, towards the supply granted to his majesty; and for the further application of the produce of the sinking fund; for applying the arrears of former taxes, &c.

As by the reduction of the East-India company's annuity, mentioned in chap. 14 preceding, a faving was gained of 32,000 l. per ann. therefore by this act the Treatury were impowered to raise 550,000 l. by issuing Exchequer bills in the usual way at any time before Christmas 1730; to be repaid out of the first aid to be granted after Michaelmas 1730; and,

and, in the mean time, to be charged on the 3Geo. furplus monies to arise after Lady-day 1730, ¹⁷²⁹ from the duties then charged with the East India company's annuity; after which this surplus was to attend the disposition of parliament; so that care was taken, that this saving should not be made part of the sinking sund, as in prudence, as well as justice, it ought to have been.

By the same act it was provided, that out of the furplusses of the finking fund arisen at Midfummer 1730, or to arise afterwards, there should be iffued to the South-Sea company, at the faid feaft-day, and afterwards quarterly, fuch monies as should then be in the Exchequer, for redeeming part of the annuities, and paying off part of the debt due to that company, until fuch payments should amount to one million; and, if the company should defire to have the whole million paid at once, the Treasury were impowered to borrow at 41. per cent. fo much as should be wanting to compleat the fame at the faid feath of Midsummer upon the credit of the future produce of the faid fund. Then followed feveral clauses for regulating the dividing of this payment among the proprietors of the South-Sea capital; for each proprietor was to receive a part of this million, in proportion to the share of the company's capital which he was intitled to, and confequently his share was, from that time, to be proportionally reduced or lessened. And there was likewife a claufe for applying to the current service 11,655 l. 11 s. 9 d. 1, arrears of land-taxes.

3Geo. II. An act for taking off certain duties on salt, and for making good any deficiencies in the funds that may bappen thereby; and for charging the reduced annuity, payable to the East-India company on the aggregate fund, &c.

By this act, the 18th branch of the customs, and the 6th and 7th branches of excise, that is to fay, the duties thereby imposed upon falt, were from and after Christmas 1730 abolished; but the duties imposed upon foreign falt imported by the 10th and 11th branches of the customs, were kept standing in the same state they were before; and, as the faid 18th branch of the customs, together with the said 7th branch of excise, had been appropriated with others, as a fund for paying the East-India company's annuity; therefore by this act, that annuity was, for the future, charged upon the aggregate fund, in case the remaining duties charged therewith. should, at the end of any quarter prove deficient; but, if the reduction, intended by chap. 14. of this fession, should take place, then the faid company's reduced annuity was to be, by th isact, wholly charged upon the aggregate fund, in case the remaining duties charged therewith, should, at the end of any quarter, prove deficient; but, if the reduction intended by ch. 14. aforefaid, should take place, then the faid company's reduced annuity was to be by this act wholly charged upon the aggregate fund, and the other duties charged therewith, was to be free from the same, and to be at the disposal of parliament. Moreover, as the faid 6th branch of excise had been appropriated to the South-Sea company; therefore by this act it was provided, that if any deficiency

out of the aggregate fund.

This was a most popular measure, not only as these duties on falt were very burthenfome upon the poor, but as the collection was very expensive to the public; for they had been put under a particular commission, and large falaries allowed to the commissioners and officers, which the people hoped to be free from; but in this they were disappointed; for, by this act, the Treasury were impowered to continue the officers in pay for eighteen months, and before the expiration of that time, as we shall see, the duties were re-established; so that this abolition feems to have been a concerted scheme for nothing else but for obtaining a new fund of credit, for the purpose of running the nation further in debt.

The 8th branch of the * inland duties, originally appropriated to the East-India company, having, by chap. 14, 16, and 20, of the former fession, been freed from that appropriation, and left to the disposal of parliament, it was now made a fund for running the nation into a new debt of 1,200,000 l. which, by this act, was to to be raised for the current service in the manner following: 400,000 l. part thereof, was to be raifed by fale of redeemable annuities, at 3 l. 10 s. per cent. to commence from Michaelmas 1731; and 800,000 l. the remaining part thereof, was to be raifed by a 101. lottery, at 31. per cent. interest, to commence at Christmas 1731; and, as a fund for paying these annuities until redemption, the faid 8th branch of the inland duties was by this act appropriated. This was a fort of legerdemain incroachment upon the finking fund; for, as the East-India company's annuity had, by chap. 20. of the last fession, been charged upon the surplusses of the aggregate fund; and, as that fund confifted of taxes, all or most of which had been originally appropriated for paying off yearly a part of the principal, as well as the growing interest, of the debts before that time charged upon

The whole amount of the money granted by 5 Geo. II. the parliament holden at Westminster the 13th 1731. of January, 1731, as appears from the following acts, is 2,883,180 l. 2 s. 5 d. ½.

Geo.II. An act for continuing the duties on malt, &c. for the year 1731.

Chap. 1.

The loan upon this act was 750,000 l. at 3 l. per cent.

Chap. 5. An act for granting an aid by a land-tax for the year 1732.

This tax was 1 s. in the pound: and the loan upon it 500,000 l. at 3 l. per cent.

Chap. 6. An act for reviving the duties on falt.

By this act, all the duties upon falt, which had been abolished by 3 Geo. II. ch. 20. and the several regulations relating thereto, were revived from and after Lady-day 1732, for the space of * three years; and, upon this fund, 500,000 l. was to be raised by loans, or Exchequer bills, at 3 l. per cent. for the service of the ensuing year. The revival of these duties was violently opposed, and the several motions that were made, shew how pernicious these duties are to several forts of manufactures, as well as our sisseries, navigation, and, indeed, our constitution. These motions were as follow, viz.

of January, 1731, as appears from the follow-

^{*} These duties were, by 7 Geo, II. chap. 6. continued for seven years; by 8 Geo, II. ch. 12. continued for sour years; by 14 Geo. II. ch. 22. continued for seven years; by 18 Geo. II. ch. 5. continued for six years; and by 26 Geo. II. ch. 3. continued without limitation.

1. That the persons employed in collecting 5 Geo. H. and managing these duties should be restrained 1731. from being a returning officer, or voting or influencing any elector, at any election of parliament men.

2. That home-made falt, used in victualling ships, should be exempted from the duties.

3. That potters should be allowed a draw-back of the duties upon all falt used in glazing their earthen ware.

4. That falt, used for manuring land, should be exempted from the duties.

5. That the affize of falt fold before these duties do take place, should be fixed.

6. That falt used in dressing and curing leather, should be exempted from the duties.

7. That falt, used in making glass and glass bottles, should be exempted from the duties.

But all these motions were rejected by a majority; and, it is almost certain, that petitions would have been presented against the bill from most parts of the kingdom; but this was prevented by the treatment of a petition from Bristol, which was offered to be presented February 22, against the revival of the falt duties, and a motion made for bringing it up; but the question was carried in the negative by a great majority; fo that, upon the whole, we may, from the several steps of this affair, form a pretty certain judgment of the complexion of this parliament; for, by the account of the falt duty laid before the House of Commons in the year 1731, it will appear, that in order to fave I s. in the pound, to the landed interest, which is but a little more than 500,000 l. the nation was

ly, being the neat produce, which for three years is 555,000 l. and 25,000 l. yearly for expences of management, which, for three years, is 75,000 l. besides the great trouble and expence which our salt-works and sisteries are exposed to, in order to intitle themselves to the drawbacks, and discounts mentioned in the said account.

Chap. 17. An act for the further application of the finking fund, by paying off one million of South-sea stock, &c.

By this act it was enacted, that out of such monies as should be in the receipt of Exchequer, of the surplusses, called the sinking sund, at Lady-day 1732, there should be issued to the South-sea company, 1,000,000 l. towards redeeming part of the annuities attending on their capital stock; and, that a proportionable part of the said stock should cease, for the benefit of the public. And, that the sum of 123,580 l. 2 s. 5 d. 1, granted for the service of the year 1731, and not applied, should be applied to the service of 1732.

and for the farther disposition of the said sund,
by paying off one million of South-sea annuities:
and for enabling his majesty out of the monies arisen by sale of lands in the island of St. Christopher's, to pay 80,000 l. for the marriage portion of the princess-royal, and 10,000 l. to the trustees for establishing the colony of Georgia in America, and for making good all desiciencies and charges, by taking of broad pieces into the Mint, out of the coinage duty, &c.

By this act, besides the million to be issued to the South-sea company, in part of payment of that moiety of their capital, called South-sea annuities, the sum of 500,000 l. was taken from the sinking fund, and applied to the current service; which misapplication was probably foreseen by some gentlemen in the House; for, in order to prevent it, a motion was made, February 7, that the House would raise the necessary supplies for 1733, without creating any

As to the clause relating to the coin; upon a petition from several merchants to the House it was resolved, that all the old broad pieces should be called in, at the rate of 41, 1 s. per ounce troy, in order to be recoined in guineas; and that the loss and charge thereof should be made good by the coinage duty, which refolution was established by this clause. By another clause in this act, the Treasury were impowered to pay out of the monies referved for building fifty new churches, 4,000 l. and 1,200 l. for the church and dormitory of St. Peter, Westminster; and, by another clause, tho' nothing of it appears in the title of the act, a resolution of May 17th was established; which was, " That one seaman be allowed upon the books of every ship of war in fea pay, in every hundred men that her complement shall consist of; and that the produce of the wages of fuch seamen, and the value of their victuals, be given and applied towards the relief of poor widows of commission and warrant officers of the royal navy, according to fuch rules, orders and regulations, as his majesty hath, or shall establish and appoint for that purpose." This was, in effect, a new grant to the crown of 50 s. per month, or 32 l. 10 s. per annum, for every hundred feamen we should afterwards have in pay, which amounts to 13,000 l. per ann. when E 2

In this fession we had no less than three select and fecret committees chosen by ballot, one for enquiring into the frauds of the charitable corporation; one for enquiring into the frauds of the York-Buildings company, and one for enquiring into the trauds and abuses in the customs; but none of them produced any remarkable effect: and, in this fession, the famous excise scheme was introduced; but such a spirit was raised in the nation against it, that, though the question was, upon every division, carried in its favour, the ministers at last were forced to drop this favourite project. your va shad aid v

Some writers have observed, that ever since the revolution, that is to fay, ever fince we had any fuch thing as a land-tax, there was almost every fession an application made for relief against the bankruptcies of the receivers of that tax, who are all appointed by the crown, and yet the people are obliged to make good their deficiencies, if the officers of the crown neglect to take fufficient fecurity. or to give proper notice of their being removed; and this year feveral of the hundreds of the county of Norfolk applied for being relieved against a loss of this kind, amounting to 4,412 l. 6 s. 11 d. 3; therefore in this fession, when the house was, April 2, to go into a committee on the land-tax bill, a motion was made for an instruction to the committee, to receive a clause to enable and direct the feveral commissioners to be appointed in the faid bill, to nominate and appoint a receiver, or receivers general for each county,

But ministers of state must, by such a method, part with the disposal of many lucrative places and employments, and therefore

By this act a new division was made of the South-sea * company's capital; for that which was then called South-fea flock, amounting to 14,651,103 l. 8 s. 1 d. was, after Midsummer 1733, to be divided into four equal parts, three of which, amounting to 10,988,327 l. 11 s. 3, was to be called New South-sea annuities, and to have no share of the profit or loss by trade, or management, but only the 4 per cent. annuity payable by the public; and the other fourth part, amounting to 3,662,7751. 17 s. 3, was to remain as a trading stock, to run the risk of all loss by trade or management, and to have the whole profits, as well as the refidue of the annuity paid yearly by government.

Chap. 12. An act for enabling his majesty to apply the sum of 1,200,000 l. out of the finking fund for the service of 1734, &c.

By this act the whole of the finking fund, and probably more than the whole, was diverted from the facred use to which it was at first appropriated, and applied to the current service, at a time when we were at peace with the whole world, except Angria the East-Indian pirate. And, lest it should happen that there may be a want of money, before money sufficient may have arisen into the Exchequer from the sinking fund, there was a clause for impowering the Treasury to borrow what might be desicient, upon the credit of the growing produce of the said fund, at 4 l. per cent.

In this fession was passed the famous law against that fort of gaming called stock jobbing, which will remain upon our records as a proof, not only of the public spirit and humanity, but of the good sense and foresight of the honourable gentleman who contrived and promoted it; for the act has ever since been found to be effectual, and is a rare instance of a new law which never stood in need of any explanation

Chap. 11. An act for enabling his majesty to apply the sum of one million out of the sinking fund for the service of 1735.

By this act the finking fund was not only diverted, but anticipated; for it was enacted, that before Lady-day 1736, a million should be isfued out of the same for the current service, and the growing produce after that time, mortgaged for raising what should be wanting to compleat that sum by loans at 4 l. per cent.

Chap. 12. An act for granting and continuing the duties on falt, &c.

By this act the duties on falt and red and white herrings, were continued for four years longer from Lady-day 1742; and a power given to borrow thereupon 500,000 l. at 4 l. per cent. Thus, in order to prevent raising the land-tax to 3 s. in the pound, we were to pay above 140,000 l. interest, before one shilling of this fund could be applied to pay off any part of the principal money borrowed upon it. A most surprising instance of parliamentary economy and public spirit!

Chap. 32. An act for continuing the additional duties upon flamped vellum, parchment and paper, laid by 12 Geo, I. ch. 33.

By this act, the above statute of 12 Geo. I. ch. 33, was continued for four years, from August 2, 1742; and it was thereby provided, that when the deficiency of the suitors money shall have been paid, the surplus should be reserved for the public, and applied as directed by parliament. The deficiency provided for by this act was 11,485 l. 4 s. 5 d.

Chap. 23. An act for laying a duty upon the retailers of spirituous liquors, and for licensing the retailers thereof.

This was the famous act against distilled spirituous liquors, by which it was enacted, that no person should sell such liquors, unmixed or mixed, in a less quantity than two gallons, without a licence, for which they were to pay 50 l. yearly; and all such liquors were loaded with a duty of 20 s. per gallon, over and above all other duties. As this was designed for prohibiting the use of such liquors, and as it would be a loss to the civil list revenue; for making good that loss, the aggregate fund was charged with 70,000l.per annum to that revenue, which most people thought was really more than it could lose lose by the prohibition; and whatever deficiency 9 Geo.II. might thereby happen in any other fund, was 1735 to be made good out of the aggregate fund. The reader may judge what confusion this would bring into our public accounts; and yet both these provisions were equally unnecessary, because the deficiency of the civil list revenue, under 800,000 l. per ann. must have been made good by parliament, and the other deficiencies would naturally have fallen upon the sinking fund. The provision in favour of the civil list was therefore a tacit confession, that the duties appropriated thereunto produced more than 800,000 l. per ann. and the other provision became necessary by way of a blind for this.

An act for enabling his majesty to borrow any sum Chap. 34. or sums of money, not exceeding 600,000 l. to be charged upon the surplusses, excesses, or overplus monies, commonly called the sinking fund, redeemable by parliament; and for the further disposition of the said fund, by paying off one million of South-sea annuities, &c.

By this act, the facred finking fund was mortgaged for 600,000 l. to be raifed by loans at 3 l. per cent. A most dangerous precedent; and yet such a precedent was agreed to by parliament in a time of profound tranquillity! but, by way of sugar-plumb, a million of the new South-sea annuities was to be paid off by clauses in this act, sounded on a resolution of a committee of the whole house, to consider of the application of the sinking fund, agreed to May 3. and, in case there should not then be so much money in that fund, the Treasury were impowered, 9 Geo. II. ered, as usual, to borrow what should be defi-1735. cient, upon the credit of the growing produce.

This tax was 2 s. in the pound, and the loan 12 G. II. upon it 1,000,000 l. at 3 l. per cent. per ann. 1738.

An act to continue the duties for encouragement of Chap. 5. the coinage of money.

By this act the coinage duties were continued for feven years, from March 1, 1738-9, and to the end of the then next session of parliament, during which time, all the acts concerning coinage, and the power of the Treasury, as to the issuing of 15,000 l. per ann. for the coinage were continued.

An all for granting to his majesty the sum of 500,000l. Chap.19: out of the sinking fund, for the service of the year 1739; and for enabling his majesty to raise the further sum of 500,000 l. out of the growing produce of the said fund, &c.

By this act the Treasury were directed to issue before Midsummer-day 1739, 500,000 l. out of the finking fund; and after that day to borrow 500,000 l. more, by loans or Exchequer bills, at 3 l. per cent. upon the growing produce of the faid fund, towards the supply of 1739. And the sum of 119,451 l. 17 s. 9 d. granted for 1738, and not applied, was directed to be applied to the supply of 1739. confidering the circumstances of the nation at that time, it is furprifing, that our ministers did not choose to raise the land-tax to 4 s. in the pound, rather than feize upon the whole of the finking fund for the current service; for the refentment of the nation then run fo high against the infults and ujust treatment we had for so many years submitted to from Spain, that such 1738.

12 G. II. a land-tax would have been readily agreed to. One would from hence be apt to conclude, that our ministers at that time were all of the same opinion with one of them, who some time before was fo open as to fay, that if it were not for our public funds, and the jobs a minister might thereby make, our government would not be worth ferving. The truth is, our public funds are a fort of false dice, which our stockjobbers play with, and our ministers may always know best and soonest, whether the dice will run high or low; especially if they take two or three Jews, Christian or Hebrew, into their fra-Therefore it is to be feared, that we never shall have a minister so honest and disinterested, as to be sincerely for putting a final end to our public funds, or to the game of stock-jobbing; and it is well known, that the famous law against stock-jobbing was crammed down their throats, by the weight and interest of one great and wife magistrate of the city of London; tho' even his weight, interest, and strength of argument, were not afterwards sufficient for carrying into execution a scheme, which would probably have put an end to most of our public funds, or at least, to the transferring them from hand to hand, upon which the profitable job-work of our ministers must always depend.

Chap. 22. An act for granting and continuing the duties upon falt, and upon red and white herrings, for the further term of seven years, &c.

By this act, the falt duties were continued from Lady-day 1746, for seven years, and upon this distant fund, the Treasury were impowered to raise the immediate sum of 1,200,000 l. by loans, or Exchequer bills, at 4 l. per cent. interest; so that for this sum in ready money, we were to pay 5 years interest, or 240,000 l. before the fund could be applied towards paying off one shilling of the principal or interest; and, as the duty, including expence of management, produces 210,000 l. yearly, (as appears from the account thereof laid before the House of Commons in the year 1731) which, in feven years, amounts to 1,470,000 l. we must reckon, that for this 1,200,000 l. in ready money, the nation was to pay 1,710,000 l. An admirably frugal method for raising the current supplies!

Chap. 41. An act for granting to his majesty the sum of one million out of the sinking fund, and for applying other sums therein mentioned for the service of the year 1741, &c.

II. year's grants, and the sum of 11,434 l. 4 s. remaining in the Exchequer, and reserved for the disposal of parliament, were appropriated to the service of 1741. In this act likewise there was a power for borrowing the money upon the credit of the growing produce of the sinking fund, at 3½ per cent. interest, in case the monies of the said sund should not come in fast enough to answer the current service. But we need not wonder that such special care was taken to have ready money for answering all the services of the ensuing year, as a new parliament was then to be chosen.

The whole amount of the money granted by the parliament holden at Westminster the 1st day of December 1741, as appears from the following acts, is 6,150,000 l.

Chap. 1. An act for continuing the duties on malt, for the year 1742.

The loan upon this act was 750,000 l. at 3 l. per cent. (In the act not exceeding 3 l. 10 s. per cent.)

Chap. 11. An act for granting an aid by a land-tax for 1742.

This tax was 4 s. in the pound, and the loan upon it 2,000,000 l. at 3 l. per cent. (in the act not exceeding 3 l. 10 s. per cent.)

An act for granting to his majesty a certain sum out 15 G. II. of the sinking fund, towards the supply of the Chap. 3. year 1742.

By this act, a million was to be raised by loans, or Exchequer bills, at 31 10 s. per cent. interest, upon the credit or the sinking fund.

An act for establishing an agreement with the go- Chap. 13. vernor and company of the Bank of England, for advancing the sum of 1,600,000 l. towards the supply for the service of the year 1742.

By this act the corporation, and all the privileges of the Bank, were continued from 1742, to August 1, 1764, in consideration of which they engaged, and were, by this act, obliged to lend to the government the sum of 1,600,000 l. at several times, on or before December 25, 1742; for which they were to have an interest after the rate of 3 l. per cent. per ann. out of the excise, and they were impowered to inlarge their capital with any further sum not exceeding 1,600,000 l. additional stock; but the whole made liable to redemption upon 12 months notice after the said 1st of August, and payment of all that should then be due to them.

An act for granting to his majesty the sum of Chap. 19. 800,000 l. to be raised by annuities transferrable at the Bank of England, &c.

By this act the Treasury were impowered to raise 800,000 l. by sale of annuities, at the rate of 3 l. per cent. transferrable at the Bank, and payable

These annuities were made payable out of the finking fund until redeemed by pailia nent, which they might be at any time, on a year's notice; and out of the same fund, the Treasury were to allow to the cashier and accomptantgeneral to be appointed by the Bank, 250l. to the former, and 200 l. a year to the latter; and, befides, they were to allow to the former out of the purchase-money, 500 l. for his trouble in receiving and accounting for it. And finally, the Bank was to continue a corporation, and enjoy all its privileges until these annuities should be redeemed.

Chap. 29. An act for granting to his majesty an additional duty on foreign cambricks, in ported into Great-Britain, &c.

By this act a duty of 1 s. 5 d. per half piece of 6 ½ ells, and 2 s. 10 d. per whole piece of 13 ells, was laid on all foreign cambricks for feven years, after August 1, 1742, over and above all former duties; and the same was made a fund for paying a bounty of one penny per yard, of all British and Irish linens from 6 d. to 12 d. per yard, price; and a half-penny per yard, for all under 6 d. that should be exported out of Great Britain, to Africa, America, Spain, or Portugal, for seven years after Lady-day, 1743.

16 G. II. An act for granting an aid by a land-tax for the 1742.

This tax was 4 s. in the pound: and the loan upon it 2,000,000 l. at 3 l. per cent. per ann.

Chap. 2. An act for continuing the malt-tax for 1743.

The loan upon this act was 750,000 l. at 3 l. per cent.

Chap. 8. An act for repealing certain duties on spirituous liquors, and on licences for retailing the same, and for laying other duties on spirituous liquors, and on licences to retail the said liquors.

By this at the high prohibitory duties upon spirituous liquors, and upon licences for retailing the same, were all abolished, and such moderate duties imposed, after Lady-day 1743, as might raife a considerable revenue, without lessening the confumption, or even the immoderate use of fuch liquors; for which reason the bill was strenuously opposed by our bishops, as it was plainly an incroachment upon the church; for it shewed, that our ministers had resolved to raise money for the public service upon the fins, as well as upon the luxuries and necessities of the people; whereas, before this time none but the clergy ever attempted, to fell indulgences, or to raise money upon the fins of the people. In times of popery, when public flews and common profficutes were to be rated, our histories well inform us, that all those about London were under the jurisdiction of the bishop of Winchester, and obliged to keep within his liberty in Southwark, called the Clink, from a little ¹⁶ G. II. bell they had for regulating the time when those ¹⁷⁴². shops of lewdness were to be opened and shut. However, as the king is now head of our church, he has a right to raise money upon the sins of the people; and, as it was foreseen, that a plentiful revenue would from hence arise, therefore notwithstanding the opposition of all our lords spiritual, the bill passed into a law. See the following act.

An act for repealing the several rates and duties Chap. 17.
upon victuallers and retailers of beer and ale, within the cities of London and Westminster, and the weekly kills of mortality; and for transferring the Exchequer bills unsatisfied thereupon, to the duties for licences to sell spirituous liquors and strong waters by retail; and also for enabling his majesty to raise a certain sum of money for the service of the year 1743, to be further charged on the said duties for licences.

As licences were, by chap. 8. aforesaid, to be granted and annually paid for, by all victuallers and alehouse-keepers who sold any spirituous liquors, and as a double duty upon licences might be a hurt to the revenue; therefore what was called the pot-ast, that is to say, the 12th of Geo. I. chap. 12. was repealed after Midsummer 1743, by the foregoing act; and, as there was the sum of 481,400 l. part of the 500,000 l. that had been borrowed upon the said pot-act, still standing out in Exchequer bills, this sum, together with 518,600 l. now to be borrowed at 3 l. per cent. making in the whole, 1,000,000 l. was, by this act, charged upon the licence duty granted by chap. 8. of this session.

16 G. II. An act for raising by annuities, and a lottery in man-1742. ner therein mentioned, the sum of 1,800,000 l. Chap. 13. at 3 l. per cent. per ann. for the service of 1743.

By this act, the sum of 1,800,000 l. was to be borrowed at 3 l. per cent. by sale of redeemable annuities, or by Exchequer bills, and by a lottery, that is to say, 1,000,000 l. by annuities, or Exchequer bills, and 800,000 l. by a lottery at 10 l. per ticket, both of which were charged upon the duties on spirituous liquors, granted by chap. 8. aforesaid.

Chap. 25. An act for granting to his majesty the sum of one million out of the sinking sund, and for applying a further sum therein mentioned, for the service of 1743, &c.

By this act, besides the million to be issued out of the sinking fund, the sum of 12,492 l. 2 s. gd. remaining in the Exchequer unapplied, of the supplies for the former year 1742, was applied to the service of 1743, with a clause of loan for borrowing the said million at 3 l. per cent. by loans or Exchequer bills.

17Geo.II. An act for continuing the duties on malt, &c. 1743.
Chap. 2. The loan upon this act was 750,000 l. at 3 l. per cent.

Chap. 17. An act for granting to kis majesty the surplus, or remainder of the monies arisen, or to arise, by the duties on spirituous liquors, granted by an act of the last session of parliament, &c. and for establishing an agreement with the united company of merchants of England trading to the East-Indies.

As the tax upon spirituous liquors, imposed by the last session had been found to produce a great deal more than would answer the first charge upon it, a case that very seldom happens; and, as this furplus was referved for the dispofition of parliament, that furplus was, by this act, vested in his majesty, and made a fund for borrowing a million from the East-India company; for the lending of which their former annuity of 128,000 l. together with this annuity of 30,000 l. were made irredeemable before a year's notice, to be given after Lady day 1745, and their exclusive trade to the East-Indies was continued from Lady-day 1766, to Lady-day, 1780; and even then not to cease but upon three years notice to be given after that day.

An act for raising by annuities, and a vottery, in 17 G. II. manner therein mentioned, the sum of 1,800,000l. 1743. Chap. 18. at 3 l. per cent. per ann. for the year 1744.

By this act, the furplus mentioned in the foregoing act [chap. 17.] was made a fund for borrowing 1,800,000 l. part thereof, viz. 1,200,000, to be raised by sale of annuities, and 600,000 l. by a 10 l. lottery; the annuities upon both to be at the rate of 3 l. per cent. but then the purchasers of the annuities for the 1,200,000 l. were to have a premium of 3 l. upon every bundred pounds they contributed, to be paid out of the purchase-money; so that, at the very beginning of the war we were now engaged in, we returned to that destructive method of paying premiums for the advance of money, fo much practifed at the end of the war in Queen Anne's time. There was now no less a sum than 5,600,000l. charged upon these new duties on spirituous liquors, and the licences for retailing the same, and they were soon found to be more than sufficient for answering the growing interest; for this is all that is now thought of, the payment of the principal being always left to the care of future generations. As this first instance of the government's raising money upon the fins of the people, has fucceeded fo well, we may perhaps fee the precedent followed in more cales than one, consequently if this war continues, we may expect to fee money raifed upon whoring, gaming, ufury, &c.

17 G. II. An act for granting to his majesty one million out 1743. Chap.23. of the sinking fund, and for applying a sum remaining in the Exchequer arisen by the coinage duty, for the service of 1744, &c.

By this act, besides the million to be taken from the finking fund, the fum of 36,000 l. remaining in the Exchequer, arisen from the coinage duty, more than had been found neceffary for answering that service, was applied to the fervice of the ensuing year. And, as every money act has generally a borrowing clause, the Treatury were impowered to borrow a million upon this act at 3 l. per cent. by loans, or Exchequer bills. In all which cases it is to be hoped, the Treasury chose to borrow by Exchequer bills, as being less expensive to the public; because it is not necessary to issue the bills but by degrees, as the money comes to be wanted, and the interest ceases as soon as money comes into the Exchequer to pay them off, or, as foon as they are paid into the hands of any of the revenue collectors. But this is a fact which our parliaments have never thought fit to inquire into.

An act for granting to his majesty several additional 18 G. II. duties upon all wines imported into Great Britain; Chap. 9. and for raising a certain sum of money by annuities, and a lottery in manner therein mentioned, to be charged on the said additional duties.

By this act, a new duty of 8 l. per ton on French wine or vinegar, and 4 l. per ton on all other wines or vinegar, over and above all other duties was imposed, from Lady-day 1745; and upon this fund, the Treasury were impowered to raise 2,000,000 l. at 3 l. per cent. payable at the Bank, that is to say, 1,500,000 l. by sale of annuities, and 500,000 l. by a 10 l. lottery; and, as an encouragement to subscribe, every subscriber for ten tickets in the lottery, was to have an additional annuity of 4 l. 10 s. per ann. for his own, or the life of any person he should name.

An act for granting to his majesty the sum of Chap. 22. 800,000 l. out of the sinking fund; and for granting a sum remaining in the Exchequer, arisen by the surplus of the duties upon malt, &c. for the service of the year 1745, &c.

By this act, besides the 800,000 l. to be taken from the sinking fund, with a clause for borrowing the money at 3 l. 10s. per cent. the sum of 21,244 l. 13 s. 8 d. 3, being the surplus of the duties on malt for 1743, was appropriated to the service of the year 1745, &c.,

By this act the inland duties, then payable on tea, were abolished, and, from Midsummer, 1745, all the tea sold in Great-Britain, was subjected to a duty of 1 s. per pound weight, and 25 l. per cent. of the gross price, for which it should be sold at the East-India sales, over and above all customs on importation, to be paid in ready money before taking it out of the warehouse.

The whole amount of the money granted by 19 G. II. the parliament holden at Westminster, the 13th 1745 day of October, 1745, as appears from the following acts, is 7,265,000 l.

An act for granting an aid by a land-tax for the Chap. 3: year 1746.

An all for continuing the duties on malt, for the Chap. 4, year 1746.

With respect to these two acts, we must recollect, that, upon the success of the young Chevalier, or Pretender in Scotland, and his entering England, though his little army never amounted to 5,000 effective men, such a pannic seized the people of this country, that it was found impracticable to borrow money as usual from private hands, either upon the land, or malt tax acts; therefore application was made, and both mortgaged to the Bank, for one million (see the following act) only at 41. per cent. Part IV.

19 G. II. from which it is evident, that notwithstanding the many addresses, offering lives and fortunes, there were very few who would venture any confiderable part of their fortune for the prefervation of our present happy establishment. And yet, at the same time, there were many voluntary subscriptions for money set on foot, to which multitudes subscribed a guinea or more, as they thought they could spare it, out of their annual income, by which, we suppose, they imagined, that they intitled themselves to some post or place in the government, as soon as it was refettled. But, whatever their views were, we must observe, that this method of raising money for the public service, was both illegal, and of the most dangerous consequence to our constitution; for it is expresly against law for any person to lend or give money for the support of the government without the authority of parliament; and therefore, in all our moneyacts in which there is a clause of credit, that clause impowers the king to borrow, only by impowering the subject to lend. In order to prevent the danger that might enfue from fuch a precedent, we are furprized, that the parliament, as it was then fitting, did not pass a short act for authorizing these voluntary contributions; but we are still more surprized, that a parliament, confifting mostly of those who called themselves Wbigs, has never since passed an act for preventing this practice being ever hereafter made a precedent, nor has ever called for any account of the money raifed by these voluntary contributions. How different are Whigs in place from Whigs out of place!

An act for establishing an agreement with the go- 19 G. II. vernor and company of the Bank of England, 1745. for cancelling certain Exchequer bills upon the terms therein mentioned; and for obliging them to advance the sum of one million upon the credit of the land-tax, and malt duties granted to bis majesty for the service of the year 1746.

By this act the Bank agreed, and was obliged to advance a million upon the above-mentioned two acts, at fuch time as the Treasury should direct, but not above 250,000 l. at a time, and each time to have 14 days notice; the whole at 4 l. per cent. And further, the Bank agreed, and were by this act obliged, to pay off and deliver up to the Treasury to be cancelled, all the Exchequer bills then standing out, which had been charged upon the duties for licences to fell spirituous liquors, by 16 Geo. II. chap. 8. amounting to 986,800 l. for which they had fettled upon them an annuity of 39,472 l. charged upon the faid duties, and a power to add the faid fum of 986,800 l. to their then capital stock, if they thought fit, and in what method they thought most proper.

An act for granting to bis majesty several rates and Chap. 12, duties upon glass, and upon spirituous liquors; and for raising a certain sum of money by annuities, and a lottery, to be charged on the said duties, &c.

By this act, feveral new duties of different kinds, over and above all former duties, were K 2 laid 1745.

19 G. II. laid upon all forts of glass to be imported into or made within this kingdom after Lady-day 1746, by which all our glass-makers were subjected to the laws of excise, and a great discouragement laid upon the manufacturing of any glass for exportation; for, as a great deal is wasted in the manufacturing of fine glass, the exporter could never intitle himself to draw back the whole of the duty, both being to be computed by the weight of the glass; and this befides the danger of weighing; but no matter what becomes of our trade or manufactures, if money can but be raifed for the service of our foreign projects.

> By the same act, new duties of different kinds were imposed upon all forts of spirituous liquors, to be made, extracted, or manufactured in Great-Britain after Lady-day 1746; great care was taken not to make these additional duties fo high as to prevent poor people's getting drunk as often as they pleased; for our view now was to raise money, not to prohibit the confumption.

Upon these two new duties, the government was impowered to raise 3,000,000 l. that is to fay, 2,500,000 l. by the fale of annuities at 41. per cent. per ann. to commence from Lady-day, 1746, though the last of the subscription-money was not to be paid till December 20, 1746; and 500,000 l. by a 10 l. lottery, upon which likewise there were to be annuities at the same rate, and to commence from Christmas, 1746; but then every subscriber for ten tickets of this lottery was to be intitled to an annuity of ol. per ann. and fo in proportion for any greater number, during his life, or the life of fuch perfon fon as he should name, over and above the re- 19 G. II. deemable annuity of 41. per cent. per ann. This 1746. , may perhaps be thought a very extravagant premium; but then we must observe, that upon this, as well as the two former lotteries, every fubscriber to the lottery was obliged to subfcribe for a proportional value of the annuities to be fold by virtue of the act; that is to fay, if he defired to subscribe for ten tickets in this lottery, he must, at the same time, subscribe for 500 l. value of the annuities confequently every subscriber for 600 l. was to have 24l. per ann.'till redeemed; and 9 l. per ann. during life, which life annuities, amounted in the whole to 45,000 l. per ann. and, supposing this to be worth 16 years purchase, we must reckon, that in this, which was but the fecond year of the French war, we paid 720,000 l. or 24 l. per cent. premium for the advance of this 3,000,000 l. befides the expence of drawing the lottery.

- Chap. 2. An act for granting an aid by a land-tax for the year 1747.

This tax was 4 s. in the pound, and the loan upon it 2,000,000 l. at 4 l. per cent.

Chap. 5. An act for continuing the duties on malt, &c.

The loan upon this act was 750,000 l. at 4 l. per cent.

Chap. 3. An att for repealing the several rates and duties upon bouses, windows, and lights; and for granting to his majesty other rates and duties upon bouses, windows, or lights, and for raising 4,400,000 l. to be charged on the said rates and duties.

By this act, the new duties imposed were, for every dwelling-house inhabited within England, 2 s. and over and above the said 2 s. for every window, or light in every such house in Great-Britain, containing from 10 to 14 windows both inclusive, 6 d. from 15 to 19 windows, both inclusive, 9 d. and from 20 inclusive and upwards, 1 s. which duties were to commence from Ladyday, 1747, and were to be paid by the inhabitants of the houses, and the act to be carried into execution by the commissioners of the land-tax. And upon this fund, was to be borrowed the sum of 4,000,000 l. at 4 l. per cent. with a premium of 10 l. per cent. from the time of lending, so that every lender was to have a yearly 20 G. II. interest of 4 s. 8 d. and to be paid 110 l. for ¹⁷⁴⁶ every too l. he advanced; yet this must be allowed to be a better bargain for the public than that which had been made the preceding seffion; and every one may now see, that it would have been still better for the public to have given 5 l. per cent. interest without any premium.

An act for granting to his majesty several rates and Chap. 10. duties upon coaches, and other carriages therein mentioned; and for raising the sum of one million by way of lottery, to be charged upon the said rates and duties.

By this act a duty of 4 l. per ann, was laid from Lady-day 1747, upon all four-wheel coaches, &c. except hackney coaches, either for one's own use, or to be let out to hire; and 40 s. per ann. on all two-wheel calashes, &c. Thus our rich people, at last, who can keep coaches of their own, submitted themselves to a tax which had been long paid by those who could not, and were therefore obliged to make use of hackney coaches; but still they took special care of themselves; for a gentleman, who hires a hackney coach, must pay at the rate of 13 l. a year, but those who are rich enough to keep coaches of their own are to pay but 4 l. per ann. - The levying of this duty was committed to the commissioners of excise, and all the penalties and forfeitures inflicted by the act, made determinable and recoverable as our other excise penalties are; fo that even our quality may now be faid to be subjected to the laws of excise. Chap. 1. The loan upon this act was 750,0001, at 41, per cent.

Chap. 7. An all for granting an aid to bis majesty by a landtax for the year 1748.

The loan upon this act was 2,000,000 l. at 4 l. per cent.

Chap. 2. An act for granting to his majesty a subsidy of poundage upon all goods and merchandizes to be imported into this kingdom; and for raising a certain sum of money by annuities and a lottery, to be charged on the said subsidy, &c.

By this act a new burden was laid upon our trade by imposing a new duty, over and above all former duties, of 5 per cent. ad valorem, upon all goods and merchandizes imported into this kingdom, after March 1, 1747, and to be levied in the same manner as the old subsidy. The whole of this duty is indeed to be drawn back, if the goods be exported in three years; but this does not prevent all the inconveniences merchants are exposed to by such duties, or all the prejudices our trade is thereby exposed to. Upon this new fubfidy a larger fum was to be borrowed than was ever before attempted to be borrowed upon any one of the many taxes in this kingdom; for no less than 6,300,000 l. was to be borrowed upon it at 4 l. per cent. and belides this annuity, the lenders were to have a 10 l. lottery ticket, by way of additional capital for every hundred pound they advanced; which addiadditional capital was likewise to be attended 21 G. II. with an annuity of 4 l. per cent. till repaid; so 1747. that, for this 6,300,000 l. the nation was to pay 6,930,000 l. with 4 per cent. interest, till the same should be repaid; which interest, it was supposed, the produce of this new subsidy would answer yearly; or, if it did not, the deficiency, as in every other case, was to be made good out of the next supplies; but, as to the principal, the payment of it was, as usual, left to some very distant suture generation; for, without a breach of parliamentary faith, the sinking sund cannot be applied to the payment of any new debt, till the whole of that due in 1716 hath been paid off*.

As the fubscriptions to all the loans hitherto made, had foon fold at an advanced price, by which the subscribers got considerable advantage; therefore, upon this loan, the courtiers resolved to referve the subscription to themfelves and their particular friends, by which fome of the chief Jews in the city, both Hebrew and Christian, were excluded; but these last had such an interest among their friends, both at home and abroad, that they prevented their buying from, or lending money to the courtiers, to make their future payments, fo that the subscriptions fell to a great discount, which obliged the parliament to suspend the two payments that should have been made April 22, and May 24, to October 22, and November 24. This was done by two refolutions agreed to April 1, and by clauses in the + att for permitting tea to be exported to Ireland and the plantations, without paying the inland duties, &c. That this discount upon the subscriptions was owing to some fuch management as we have mentoned, and not to any want of money, is evident; because, as soon as the peace was concluded, the subscriptions rose to a premium; but we hope, it did not oblige our courtiers to accept of any conditions, they would not otherwise have agreed For indeed, it feems, that foon after Christmas, they were refolved to have a peace at any rate; otherwise they would never have consented to that resolution which was agreed to nem. con. Jan. declaring that it was the opinion of that house, that the exportation of corn to foreign parts, was very beneficial to this kingdom, and ought not to be probibited at that time. As there was then a perfect famine all over the kingdom of France, one would think, that it was then a very proper time to do as the parliament and government did in the 8th year of Queen Anne, by prohibiting for a year the exportation of corn, and taking all possible care that the enemy should not be supplied with it from Dantzick, Barbary, or any other place.

Chap.23. An act for granting to his majesty the sum of one million out of the sinking fund, for the service of the year 1748; and for applying a sum of money remaining in the Exchequer, arisen by the rates and duties on houses, which determined at Ladyday, 1747, &c.

This act was only for applying a million out of the finking fund to the current fervice, and enabling the government to borrow the money at 41. per cent.

23 G. II. An act for reducing the several annuities, which now carry an interest after the rate of 4 l. per cent. per ann. to the several rates of interest therein mentioned.

As there was now great plenty of money, it encouraged our ministers to form a scheme for reducing the interest upon all our funds to 3 l. per cent. for which purpose it was by this act enacted, that all the public creditors, at 4 l. per cent. per annum, amounting in the whole to 57,703,475 l. 6 s. 4 d. ½, who should, on or before February 28, 1749, subscribe their names, or signify their consent, to accept of an interest of 3 l. per cent. per ann. to commence December 25, 1757, should have 4 l. per cent. until December 25, 1750, and from thence 3 l. 10 s. per cent. until December, 1757, without being liable to be redeemed.

This scheme was not, it seems, at first concerted with the proper persons; for the three great companies, and most of our rich Hebrew. as well as Christian Jews, at first refused to come into it; but the chief leaders of these great bodies of men being foon after, we 'fuppose, properly talked to, they were all brought into the scheme, and most of these public creditors had subscribed before the day appointed; and, as to those who had not subscribed, they were, by a resolution of the committee of ways and means, and a new act passed in pursuance of it, allowed to subscribe on or before May 30, 1750; but then, by way of punishment for their obstinacy, their yearly interest was to be reduced to 3 l. per cent. at Christmas 1755; which most of them submitted to before the said 30th of May; and thus was carried into execution one of the most beneficial schemes, that has, for a 23 G.II. long time, been set on foot in this country.

An att for granting an aid by a land-tax for the Chap. 2. year 1750.

This tax was 3 s. in the pound, and the loan upon it 1,500,000 l. at 3 l. per cent. per ann.

An act for continuing the duties on malt, &c.

Chap. 3.

The loan upon this act was 750,000 l. at 3 l. per cent.

An act for granting to his majesty the sum of one Chap. 16. million, to be raised by annuities at 3 l. per cent. per ann. and charged on the sinking fund, transferrable at the Bank of England.

As this nation, by the punctual payment of the interest growing due upon our public debts for fo many years, is now become the common repository or sink for the money of almost all those idle drones throughout Europe, who resolve to live upon the interest of their money, without employing it, either in trade, manufactures, or land, by which the poor are employed, and get a living, it became so plenty here, that the government found they could already borrow all they wanted at 3 l. per cent. therefore neither the land, nor the malt-tax acts of this year, allowed of a higher than that interest; and the subscription for the purchase of annuities at 3 l. per cent. was filled as foon as opened; as the first payment of the purchase-money was only 10 l. per cent. to be made April 20, and the last payment of 251. per cent. not till December 18, 1749 from Lady-day, 1750.

Chap. 21. An act for granting to his majesty the sem of 900,000 l. out of the sinking fund, for the service of 1750; and for applying certain surplus monies, remaining in the Exchequer, as part of the supply of the said year, &c.

Besides the 900,000 l. to be issued out of the sinking sund, or raised at 3 l. per cent. upon the credit of this act, for the current service, the following surplusses, remaining in the Exchequer, after satisfying all payments and annuities due thereon, were applied to the same use, viz.

	1.	S.	d.
Surplus of the additional duties at Christmas last, upon all wines imported.	17,553	10	10
Ditto at Michaelmas last, of the duties upon hou- fes, windows, and lights, and on coaches and other carriages,	29,856	1	11 =
Ditto, at Michaelmas last of the subsidy of ton- nage and poundage, on goods and merchandizes	71,116	17	6
imported,	118,526	10	3 =

This act likewise directed, that the sum of 65,674 l. 8 s. 6 d. savings on forage, &c. for the troops of Russia, and the subsidies to the landgrave of Hesse Cassel, elector of Bavaria, and duke of Wolfenbuttle, and the sum of 46,849 l. 11 s. 10 d. savings from the pay of the

the land forces, should be applied towards the 23 G. II. expences of the land forces in 1749. But, as 1749 these sums were to be taken out of the savings upon other articles, then in the hands of the paymaster-general, we have not stated them, as they were not to be provided for by this session in any other way than by directing how those savings should be applied.

An act for making good a deficiency upon the revenue Chap.25: of the office of keeper or clerk of the hanaper, and for preventing any future deficiency therein, to answer the public services provided for out of the same; and for augmenting the income of the office of master or keeper of the Rolls.

By this act, the new stamp duty first imposed by 12 Geo. I. chap. 33. which had been allowed to expire in 1746, as the deficiencies charged upon it were all then satisfied, with a surplus of 13,6981. 1 s. 11 d. over, was revived, and continued from the 24th of June 1750, for ever. Out of the furplus then in the Bank, the debt of the hanaper office was by this act directed to be paid; and the residue, together with the yearly produce, was made a fund for the 3000 l. per ann. granted to that office and the Master of the Rolls. The following recital in this act will explain the nature of the above-mentioned debt due to the banaper, viz. "And whereas the " office of keeper, or clerk of the banaper in "Chancery, is a very ancient office, held and " enjoyed by grant from his majesty's royal " predeceffors, kings and queens of this realm; " and the yearly revenue thereof, confifting of " feveral certain yearly rents or fums, referved " upon grants made by the crown of the feve1749-

An all for granting to his majesty an additional Chap. 46. duty upon spirituous liquors, and upon licences for retailing the same; and for repealing the all of 20 Geo. II. ch. 39, &c.

The reason of making this act, appears in the preamble to it, which is as follows: "Whereas "the immoderate drinking of distilled spirituous "liquors, by persons of the meanest and lowest fort, hath of late years increased, to the great detriment of the health and morals of the common people; and the same hath, in a great measure, been owing to the number of per-Part IV.

By this act, additional stamp duties were imposed upon the proceedings in the courts at WestWestminster, for paying the following sums to 32 G. II. the judges, in augmentation of their falaries, 1751. viz. 500 l. to each of the puisne judges of the court of King's-Bench; gool to each of the judges in the court of Common Pleas; 1,000 l. to the chief baron of the Exchequer; 500 l. to each of the other barons of the Coif; 200 l. to the chief justice of Chester; 150 l. to the second justice of Chester; 150 l. to each of the Welch judges, to be paid yearly, as the falaries have accustomarily been paid: and, if the duties should be deficient, the Treasury may apply any unappropriated monies in the Exchequer in aid thereof. And, when any deficiency should happen the payments to the judges were to be in proportion to the falaries respectively allowed them: and the furplus monies of the duties were to be referved for the future disposition of parliament. --- The falaries of the judges in Scotland were to be augmented out of the duties appropriated for that purpose by 10 Ann. ch. viz. 300 l. to the president of the court of Seffion; 300 l, to the chief baron of the court of Exchequer; and 2001, to each of the other judges in the faid courts.

Here we cannot forbear taking notice of a remarkable petition 18 H.VI. [A.D. 1430.] rot. 27. of the judges of the King's-Bench and Common Pleas the justices of Assize, the king's serjeants and attorney, (there was no solicitor general, till Edward the Fourth's time) complaining of the lord-treasurer Kenwoldmershe, that he had not paid them their salaries, and given them their robes and usual fees: upon which they desired that the clerk of the Hanaper might pay them out of the first money that came into his hands, and that the collectors and receivers of the great and

32 G. II. petty customs, in the ports of London, Bristol, 1758. and Kingston upon Hull, may have like power, and be obliged to pay them, without any delay or respite, twice a year at Easter and Michaelmas, their respective salaries, and that they may have money for their robes, twice a year at Christmas and Whitsontide, according to custom. But the collectors were not to be charged with the payment of these wages, till the clerk of the Hanaper had been examined by the lordchancellor, whether he had money to pay the feveral fums charged on his receipt. This petition was confirmed in parliament, and accordingly writs issued to the treasurer and chamberlains of the Exchequer, to know what were the judges falaries; who returned, that they had usually paid the two chief justices forty pounds a year each,

By this act his majesty was enabled, by warrant under his royal sign manual, to authorize the Treasury to raise the sum of one million by loans, or Exchequer bills; to be paid out of the next supplies, and if none sufficient should be granted before July 5, 1760, then they are to be paid out of the sinking sund; and the monies so issued, to be replaced out of the first supplies.
